THE "SURREY SIDE" OF LONDON.

A DISGRACE TO CIVILISATION.

FAMOUS ARCHITECT'S VIEWS ON PROPOSED CHARING CROSS BRIDGE

For some reason or other—the physical character of the site, it may be, or some accident of history—great cities seldom bestride the river on the banks of which they stand with any approach to impartiality. One side seems to be unduly favoured at the expense of the other. Rome, for example, Vienna, Dresden, or Cologne—and this is certainly the case with London—says Sir Reginald Blomfield, R.A., writing in the Evening Standard. All its wealth and magnificence and architectural effort are concentrated on the Middlesex side, and the South or Surrey side is still a dreary and interminable wilderness of mean buildings and sordid streets. Here the real task of London of the future lies.

Moreover, the main lines of traffic east and west and north and south in London north of the river are fixed and cannot now be changed, though they may be improved in detail, so that it is not use looking here for any large and drastic reorganisation. All that can be done is to keep a watchful eye on the prodigious buildings, erected by syndicates, that keep springing up in unexpected places.

Chester Red.
It is only fair to add that some of these buildings are well designed and pleasant to look upon. One welcomes, too, the return to cheerful red brick, and a sparing use of stone instead of the everlasting stucco and the needless cost of Portland stone.

If only the architects will keep clear of silly ornament on the hand, refrain from taking factories as their models on the other, use good materials and pay attention to such time-honoured elements of architecture as mass silhouette, proportion and relevance to the site, one may look forward to a complete change in the architecture in the main streets of London north of the river.

What is to become of the costly and gigantic building in the future it is difficult to see. People will not continue to be able to pay the high rents and excessive prices which alone justify them financially.

Mr. Lansbury's Zeal.

One more important point on the North side is the preservation of our parks. We do not want them converted into football pitches and running-tracks and paddie-ponds—excellent things in their proper place, but not in Hyde Park or Regent's Park. In his benevolent zeal for "the people" the First Commissioner seems to have forgotten that the vast majority of "the people" are hardworking, sober persons who want some quiet place where they can rest from their labours, on grass, not mud, and under the shade of trees, not pavilions.

There is magnificent scope for the energy of an enthusiastic First Commissioner across the river, and the real field for comprehensive and most necessary reorganisation is on the Surrey side, that block of land which extends from South Lambeth on the west to Deptford on the east, bounded by the river, north and east sides by the river, and extending south to the roads that run from Vauxhall Bridge to New Cross.

Maze of Mean Streets.

In this great area, nearly four miles wide east and west and two miles north and south, the only open spaces are Lambeth Palace and Kennington Oval and Kennington Park on the west, a few small and unhappy-looking squares, and, far away on the east near Rotherhithe, Southwark Park. The rest of this district is covered by a maze of little streets, mean houses, a few churches, and the various viaducts and stations of the Southern Railway.

The condition of things in this part of London is a disgrace to our civilisation, and all who have given thought to these matters have long felt that it is here that the great effort should be made, that all this part of London should be cleared and cleaned, and replanned with broad streets, sufficient open spaces, healthy houses, and a river front converted to the use of the public as on the Middlesex side, by an Embankment, a roadway and garden extending from the County Hall to Blackfriars Bridge.

Ideal Made Impossible.

It might be done so well, yet the whole of this most urgent reconstruction is likely to be blocked by the official scheme for the proposed new Charing Cross Bridge. The site allotted to the station in that scheme would form a solid wedge with Waterloo Station shutting off Lambeth from Southwark, sacrificing, in fact, all this vitally important part of the site next the river to the Southern Railway. Moreover, if the station is built on the proposed site with the railway diverted into it, it is certain that the lowering of the railway and station underground, the ideal of the town planners, will never be carried out in the future; on the contrary, there will be further indulgence in the poisonous habit of building viaducts amid crowded buildings.

The little bits of embankment suggested would be wholly inadequate, and appear to include a space of about 200 feet by 80 feet with a low headway all covered in by the new road, which would be a public nuisance.

Insupportable Obstacle.

If there were no station near the river, Belvedere-road, which comes a mere out-of-the-way in the official scheme, might be widened to sweep round the Embankment and its gardens till it joined Blackfriars-road opposite its intersection with Southwark-street. But the official scheme appears to place an insupportable obstacle in the way of any comprehensive schemes of traffic and town planning.

It is believed that of the twelve or thirteen millions (the figure is quite vague) which is the net estimated cost of the official scheme, not less than two-thirds will go in compensation and reconstruction, out of which the public gets no sort of benefit whatever. That eight or nine millions would go a long way towards starting the reorganisation of London on the Surrey side, and the bridge would give us the Bridge.

HUMAN SACRIFICE IN BURMA.

OFFERING TO SPIRITS.

WORK OF ABOLITION BY OFFICIAL.

Mr. J. T. O. Barnard, late Deputy Commissioner, Burma Frontier Service, in a lecture before the Central Asian Society recently described the measures for which he had executive responsibility to suppress slavery and human sacrifice in the remote Kachin country to the north of the administered areas of Upper Burma. Sir Harcourt Butler, by whom, as Governor of Burma, the work was undertaken and mainly carried out, was in the chair.

Mr. Barnard stated that when the Survey of India was carrying out a detailed survey in the Hukwang Valley a few years ago, slaves and the relatives of the victims of human sacrifice appealed to the officers for protection. Sir Harcourt Butler's Government came to the conclusion that a state of affairs under which men and women were seized and sacrificed in places a few days' march from a British railway could no longer be tolerated.

Fear of Spirits.

At a big mance held by Sir Harcourt Butler in the Hukwang Valley on January 27, 1923, and attended by Kachin and Naga chiefs from far and near, it was agreed after much discussion that the slaves should be released, and their owners compensated. The Nagas declared, however, that they could never abandon the custom of human sacrifice, for if they did not propitiate the big gods, or spirits, with the blood of human beings, they would rain sickness on them and blight on their crops.

They were told that an officer would be sent to inquire into all these matters, but that human sacrifice would have to cease once and for all.

Mr. Barnard then gave details of the expeditions he conducted, both in the Valley and in the Triangle, to carry out the release of the slaves and to bring human sacrifice to an end. He stated that the total number of slaves released as a result of the action taken by the Government of Burma was 8,853, and the total cost of redemption was approximately £27,000.

Released Slaves.

The question of the occupation or administration in some form of the Hukwang and the Triangle was under consideration. Meanwhile both these areas were visited yearly by expeditions attending to the welfare of the released slaves and seeing them started in life.

The latest reports regarding the condition of these peoples were quite satisfactory. But it was only by some form of administration that the released slaves could be really cared for and peace and order kept among these turbulent people. Expeditions were expensive and the work achieved by them was limited.

Mr. Barnard described his journey made in 1928 to visit the Nagas, who practised human sacrifice, and cross the Patkai range into Assam. He saw the stocks both for the feet and the hands of the prospective victims. He saw skulls and chin-bones hanging up in houses. The sacrifice began with great feasting and drinking, when the doomed man was given all he wanted in the way of food and drink.

Bag for Quick Killing.

He used to beg for quick killing and got it, but if obstreperous he was knocked into insensibility, care being taken, however, not to render the offering unacceptable by fracturing the skull. Intermediaries bought the victims from Naga villages farther west and resold them in the sacrificing area, where sometimes as much as Rs. 200 or Rs. 400 (£30) was paid for one. Sacrifices were made irrespective of age or sex.

The proposal made by the Nagas that the Government should supply the victims and hold one big final sacrifice for propitiating the gods and abolishing the custom gave some idea of the scant value of human life in the eyes of these savages. He was happy to be able to state, on the authority of the latest reports he had seen, that the custom had now practically ceased both on the Upper Chindwin side and on the Myitkyna side.

Mr. Barnard's Work.

The chairman said that it was mainly owing to the great influence of Mr. Barnard with the tribes that the release of the slaves was effected without very much difficulty, considering the great economic upheaval which such an operation entailed. He could assure them that no act of his official career filled him in retrospect with so much satisfaction as being instrumental in giving life and freedom and hope to so many of his unfortunate fellowmen.

CURATE KILLED IN TUBE.

HATED IDEA OF LIVING ON WIFE'S MONEY.

An inquest was held recently at Holborn by Sir Walter Schroder on the Rev. Edward Griffith Evans, of Albion-road, Stoke Newington, N., who was killed by a train at the British Museum Underground Station. Mr. Evans had been for three weeks before his death temporary curate at St. Matthias Church, Stoke Newington.

He was rector of Edburton, Sussex, from 1913 to 1928.

The inquest was adjourned. The coroner said that he understood there were a number of people on the platform. He did not feel justified in closing the inquest until an effort had been made to find witnesses. He instructed that an appeal for witnesses should be broadcast and asked the Press to assist him in the matter.

The widow, who lives at Queen's-road, Epsom, W., said that her husband was 52. He had held a living at Willington, Eastbourne, previously but had to give it up because of ill-health. Recently he had lived in rooms in Albion-road, Stoke Newington.

In July, 1927, he had a serious accident, which forced him to give up his work at Edburton, because country work necessitated so much walking.

Since 1913 he had complained of "cracks in his head." He served from 1914 to 1919 in the war in France, South Africa and Macedonia.

Recently he had worried about his health, but one day he rang up to arrange to go to the Italian art exhibition.

Worried About Money.

"When he had to give up his living," Mrs. Evans said, "he was very worried because he was afraid he would not be able to support himself. I had money, but he hated the idea of living on my money."

Mr. Alfred Dixon, Mr. Evans's landlord, said that when Mr. Evans arrived at Stoke Newington he seemed very depressed. He complained of not sleeping well.

The Rev. Ernest Driver, vicar of St. Matthias, Stoke Newington, said Mr. Evans had been his friend for more than 20 years. On the day of the tragedy he was due to take a meeting in the afternoon, and in the morning he appeared quite normal.

The coroner: Had he ever threatened to take his life?

Mr. Driver: He was a most saintly man, a wonderful man, the very last man to make any plans for self murder.

Recently, Mr. Driver said, Mr. Evans had been feeling disappointed and worry that he was not doing things as he should have done them.

Bandage Round His Eyes.

Mr. Leonard F. Jarrett, station master at the British Museum Station, said that when the body was removed from under the train there was a bandage of some flannel substance, about five inches wide, over the eyes.

Mr. Driver said that this bandage looked like the scarf Mr. Evans usually wore round his neck. He was wearing a scarf on the morning of his death.

The coroner said that it was quite possible that the movement of the train put the scarf round Mr. Evans's head.

Medical evidence was that there were no signs of electrocution. The cause of death was shock, due to multiple injuries.

JONAH AND THE WHALE.

EXPLORER BELIEVES IT TO BE TRUE.

A spirited defence of the literal truth of the story of Jonah and the Whale (recently discussed at St. John's Cathedral) appears in a London paper. Mr. Herbert G. Ponting, the well-known traveller, writes:—

Some of the earlier parts of the Bible may be legend, but Jonah lived in the days of Jeroboam, about 3,000 years ago, and the Prophet's adventure with the Whale occurred on a journey by sea from Joppa to Tarshish only 1,000 years before the Christian Era.

New Testament Reference.

It is not only fully recounted in the Bible in the Book of Jonah, but it was referred to by the Saviour when He preached to the Pharisees at Capernaum: "For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." (St. Matthew, xii, 40.)

As every marine biologist knows, it would have been perfectly possible for a sperm whale to have swallowed Jonah down its cavernous throat without even noticing such a morsel, for these great toothed whales feed on the gigantic squids and octopods which live in the depths of the ocean, and can swallow colossal masses of flesh. Moreover, it is more than likely that sperm whales, which are now rapidly becoming extinct, lived in Mediterranean waters 3,000 years ago.

GALLANT WOMAN DOCTOR.

SURGERY IN COAL MINE
AFTER EXPLOSION.

A young woman doctor played a heroic part in the rescue efforts following the explosion at Lyme Pit, Haydock, Lancashire, in which five miners were killed and 20 injured.

Dr. Arthur Dowling, of Haydock, and Dr. Winifred Bridge, descended the pit.

They worked unflinchingly for hours to help those who had been seriously injured.

The fire which followed the explosion endangered the lives of the rescue workers.

After strenuous efforts, the flames were put out by a gang equipped with extinguishing apparatus.

One of the first members of the rescue brigade to go into the pit, a man named Harry Len, paid a glowing tribute to the woman doctor.

"I went down with Miss Bridge," he said.

"It was bad travelling for her," but she was splendid. As we got nearer to the scene of the accident the flames became much stronger, but Dr. Bridge set up her surgery about a hundred yards from the spot. There she attended to the men as they struggled to her."

Dr. Bridge on her Experiences.

Dr. Bridge is the assistant to Dr. Watkinson, the colliery doctor, who was away. She was taking his place at the cottage hospital attending to the injured men when a call came for doctors to go down the pit. With her was Dr. Dowling, who is the medical officer for the Lancashire and Cheshire Miners' Federation.

Dr. Bridge without hesitating a moment went down with Dr. Dowling.

They spent two hours ministering to the injured before returning to the hospital to carry on their work there. Dr. Bridge said:—

"The journey down in the cage was certainly a little trying."

"It was a difficult journey along the galleries for one who is not used to it. We were bent double in places and my clothes hampered me in climbing over the debris and broken boxes which were scattered about."

"We gave morphia injections to injured men to ease their pain as they were carried back along the tortuous galleries to the cage."

Dr. Bridge, whose name is at Ashton-in-Makerfield, near Wigan, had not been down a pit before.

"She was wonderful," said Dr. Dowling.

"Dr. Bridge is a fine athletic girl, and she kept her head. We found some of the dead lying in the galleries, and their bodies were taken to the surface by their comrades."

"We did what we could with the injured and they were carried through the workings to the shaft on stretchers."

"Dr. Bridge was a very gallant woman. She worked hard in the depths of the pit, and I cannot speak too highly of her."

An official statement by the owners of the pit, Messrs. Richard Evans, said an explosion of fire damp followed a shot fired in the Wigan four-foot mine.

Although during the day 400 men are employed at the colliery only 45 miners were in the pit at the time.

RESEARCH ON STEAM FLOW.

EIGHT YEARS' TASK CONCLUDED.

With the presentation of the sixth report of the Steam Nozzles Research Committee to the Institution of Mechanical Engineers at the Engineers' Club, Manchester, recently, a research which has extended over eight years was brought to an end.

The Committee was formed by the Council of the Institution in 1914 for the purpose of carrying out experimental work relating to the action of steam passing through nozzles and steam turbines. At that time, though much valuable work had been accomplished by previous experiments concerning the general phenomena of nozzle flow, the available information regarding the efficiencies of the curved type of nozzle used in general steam-turbine practice was not as complete or reliable as could be desired, and it was hoped that investigations in this field would yield results of interest and value.

Straight and Curved Nozzles.

The observed difference between the results obtained with straight and curved nozzles, the Committee reported, "suggested that an increase in the radius of curvature of curved-axis nozzles might yield an improvement. Two impulse nozzles have accordingly been used with a radius of curvature almost double that of the nozzles first tested. These large-radius nozzles have also been used to determine whether there is any advantage in rounding the entrance of impulse nozzles, and for a series of tests with steam at a much higher temperature than usually employed in the tests."

"The efficiency of a curved nozzle" (said the Committee later in a summary of the work done) "is (also) dependent upon the value of the radius of curvature of the mean path of the steam; the effect of increasing the radius being to raise the efficiency over the range of speed which would normally be employed in such nozzles. The amount of the improvement is not constant, but depends on other factors, being least for a large-angle long-throat nozzle and greatest with short throat length and small discharge angle. In the nozzles tested, which had cast-in division plates of uniform thickness, the average increase in velocity coefficient brought about by doubling the radius of curvature of the plates was a little less than 1 per cent."

Objects of Inquiry Attained.

"The objects of the inquiry," concluded the report, "may now be said to have been attained, and much supplementary work has been undertaken in extension of the original programme of experiments. These tests of steam-nozzle efficiency have demonstrated the utility and reliability of the impulse method of testing, and have shown that, by its use, results of practical value in the design of steam turbines may be obtained."

"The Committee has gone with growing satisfaction, the adoption by many turbine manufacturers, in this country and elsewhere, of the type of apparatus which was first developed for use in these experiments, and hopes to see a continuation of the work carried on by these investigators, by the further testing of individual types of nozzles, with a view to the development of yet more perfect forms than those which are now in use."

DRY ECZEMA ON BABY'S FACE

Caused Great Disfigurement. Cuticura Healed.

"When my baby was four months old she had dry eczema on her face. It first started with a red rash and itched and burned so that I had to muffle her hands to keep her from scratching. It caused great disfigurement for a time and many a restless night."

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After using it two days she got relief so I purchased more and in a short time she was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. E. Smith, 11, Hope St., Maidstone, Kent, Eng.

HUMOUR: ANCIENT AND MODERN.

"Then can you tell me, please," she asked, "how one can teach the microbes to breathe deeply?"

"Did Berenice describe her new evening frock to you?"

"Not completely; she only spent the afternoon with me."

Artist: "Do you think the great American novel will ever be written?"

Author (sighing deeply): "It will not only be written—it will be rejected."

"Mother," said little John, bursting into the house, "there's going to be trouble at the chemist's. His wife has got a baby girl, and he's had a 'Boy Wanted' sign in his window for a week."

"But you are an undertaker!" cried the horrified girl. "The other night at the fancy-dress ball you told me you were a doctor."

"I never did anything of the sort," he protested. "I said that I followed the medical profession."

"Did I hear you say, conductor, that a locomotive was at the rear of the train?"

"Yes, ma'am. We've got a locomotive at each end. It takes an extra one to push up the mountain."

"Dear dear, what shall I do? I dislike to ride with my back to the locomotive."

A dear old lady had attended a health lecture, and stayed behind to ask the lecturer a question.

"Did I understand you to say," she asked, "that deep breathing kills microbes?"

"I certainly did say that many microbes are killed by deep breathing," replied the lecturer.

A woman arriving in England after a short visit to the Continent was asked the usual question by the Customs official at the landing port: "Anything to declare, madam?"

"No," she replied, sweetly, "nothing."

"Then, madam," said the official, "am I to take it that the fur tail I see hanging down under your coat is your own?"

He: "When I dance with you, I feel as though I were treading on the clouds."

She: "Don't be mistaken. Those are my feet."

"Is this the Elephant?" asked the woman passenger, digging the official in the ribs with her umbrella.

"No, mum; it's the conductor."

"Did you give your wife that little lecture on economy?"

"Yes."

"Any results?"

"I've got to give up silk shirts."

Bus conductor: "How old are you, my little girl?"

Five-Year-Old: "If the corporation doesn't object, I prefer to pay full fare and keep my own statistics."

Visitor: "Well, well! What a fine little man! Sitting there, so nice and quiet!"

Junior: "Yes, ma'am! I always sit still until someone puts some money in my bank, and then I say, 'Thank you.'"

A visitor was playing golf with an English peer, and the former had been carving up the turf all over the course.

Eventually the peer said: "Pardon me, but is it not the custom in your club to replace the dirt?"

"Dirt?" remarked the visitor. "What do you mean?"

"I mean, don't you replace the turf?"

"Replace the turf?" the visitor repeated. "Oh, no; only when putting!"

The Christmas dance was in full swing.

They, he and she, had been sitting out this one, also the one before, and the one before that.

She was patting her hair straight. He was retrieving his tie from under his right ear.

"This, you know," he panted, "is the first time I have ever been in love."

She regarded him with eyes round with wonder.

"Well, I must say," she gasped, "for kindergarten work you're an infant prodigy."

YESTERDAY'S SOLUTION.

THE WORLD AT ITS WORSE.

TRYING TO KEEP YOUR MIND ON THE CONVERSATION WHEN YOUR LITTLE BOY HAS BEEN ASKED TO PASS THINGS AT A TEA PARTY.

GUYAS WILLIAMS

MUST WEED-OUT UNFIT.

SCIENTIST'S CONTENTION.

Broadcasting a talk in the "Points of View" series from London, Sir James H. Jeans, the scientist, said man had ruled the earth only for a fraction of a million years, and it rather seemed that he must still establish his claim to be the permanent governor of the earth. Man had fought against the wild beasts which once overran the earth and won, but he had not yet conquered the microbe.

"If we are to make the earth a paradise again," he said, "it seems to me that our first duty is at all costs to prevent the moral, mental and physical wreckage of today from reproducing itself and starting a new sequence of unhappy lives trailing down through endless generations."

"To encourage this stream of misery becomes a vice, to check it a virtue. To-day there is no weeding out of the unfit. We save nearly all our babies indiscriminately, good and bad, strong and weak, healthy and diseased. Unhappily the largest contribution comes from the most miserable and least successful classes. I do not believe that we shall get a happy and successful England unless we replenish our stock, mainly from the more happy and successful members of the community."

BIRTHPLACE OF THE BRONTES.

BRADFORD HOUSE TO BE SOLD.

The house where Charlotte Brontë and her sisters were born is included in property at 74, Market Street, Thornton, Bradford, which is to be offered for sale by auction.

The Council of the Brontë Society at a meeting discussed the possibility of acquiring the building, but no decision was reached. It is understood that sufficient funds for the purpose are not available, but that the society would undertake to look after the property if a purchaser made it over to them.

The Brontë Society many years ago placed a tablet on the wall of the house (part of which is now a butcher's shop) recording that Charlotte, Emily, and Anne Brontë, and their brother Patrick were born there.

The house is to be sold along with two other houses and a small shop, which with it, form one block.

In his concluding remarks Sir James said: "Some of the speakers in last year's symposium discussed the claims of Spiritualism or psychical research to provide proof of the survival of the dead. Speaking as a scientist, I find the alleged proofs totally unconvincing; speaking as a human being, I find most of them ridiculous as well."

ROBBED WHILE PREACHING

SHOCK FOR SCOTTISH DIVINE.

The Rev. Joseph Moffett, of Crown-court Church, Drury-lane, one of the four principal Scottish churches in London, has been robbed while delivering a sermon in his church.

Mr. Moffett is known as the "Silent Samaritan." Ex-convicts in particular have enjoyed many a comfortable night's board and lodging at his expense.

"During the service," he said to a Press representative, "my outdoor coat and vest were left hanging in the vestry. My gold watch and chain were in the vest pocket, and my wallet, containing £5 10s., a cheque, a postal order, and some papers, was in the inside pocket of the jacket."

"When I came down from the pulpit the wallet and contents were gone. The thief must have been thoroughly conversant with the procedure of the church, otherwise he could not have timed his actions so successfully."

"The church doors are not reopened until a few minutes before the close of the service, and he must have slipped in then and made straight for the vestry before the congregation began to come out."

"My overcoat was stolen in similar circumstances a few years ago."

THE WOMAN'S CORNER.

THE "AS YOU LIKE IT" VOGUE.

PARIS PLAYS FOR SAFETY.

Ever since the war women have had everything their own way.

Fashions have been designed to suit our requirements; laws have been altered to favour us; men have obeyed us meekly.

Now the creators of fashion have suddenly leagued themselves together, and agreed to put us back twenty years into clothes that are reminiscent of the reign of Edward VII., but the fly in the ointment is that every Paris dress house has interpreted this thought in its own particular way. If we wish to be smart we must now be prepared to wear waist-bands, under-bodices fastened with hooks and eyes, muslin blouses, evening gowns with trains sweeping the floor, and dance frocks with a more or less even hem line just missing the floor by an inch or so.

It is difficult for a woman to judge these 1930 evening dresses sensibly because we are not accustomed to the new lines of them yet.

They seem either hideously ugly or strangely beautiful!

Evening Styles.

There are at least three different styles of evening dresses that will be fashionable this summer among women who follow Parisian fashions.

One has a flounced skirt, and is made of soft materials, such as plain or patterned chiffon, net, or lace.

The second has a long flowing skirt with a train. These dresses are usually made of satin, heavy, crepe, and the thicker materials used for evening wear, such as faille. The third type of evening gown has voluminous panels and draperies, which sweep out and around the wearer as she walks or dances.

All these various evening dresses have one thing in common. They fit very closely round the waist.

The princess line which we know so well is still there, but it has moved much higher up. Instead of starting from the normal waist line and fitting almost skin-tight to half-way down the thigh, as it did last season, now it fits almost skin-tight from three or four inches above the waist to the hip line.

Many Boleros.

This effect is produced by the material being draped closely round the waist and fastened with an ornament on one side, or by the bodice being gathered, or shirred into the little perpendicular bands of material, or simply by cutting the bodice to fit closely, and wearing a narrow waistband of the same material.

Boleros, capes, and fichus are used in every conceivable way on evening dresses, afternoon dresses, morning dresses, sports suits, and coats of all kinds.

The bolero can be seen on a thousand and one different dresses, but on each dress it is slightly different in cut.

In some cases it is used for the back of a morning frock. In others it is seen over one shoulder of an evening gown. The front of an evening dress may have a bolero cut at an angle hanging in a point at one side and sewn to the bodice at the other.

Pastel Shades.

The outstanding features of one of the more important collections of the just now include short hiplength evening coats with sleeves that reach just below the elbow and are worn with long suede gloves; evening dresses with little circular shoulder capes reaching half-way between the shoulder and elbow and tied in a soft bow or knot in front of the bodice; and ankle-length skirts made with two very full flounces, the top one rather shorter than the lower.

This style is used for patterned or plain chiffon, net, or lace. Two of the patterned chiffon dresses have backgrounds, one of pastel blue and the other of pastel pink with large over-checks in white. Many of the day dresses have little capes of imitation bolero effects.

Transparent Fichus.

One of the greatest difficulties that the dress designers have been faced with is the question of under-slips for net or lace evening dresses.

These gowns are made with layer upon layer of net, and are worn by the mannequins with no under-slip at all, so that in certain lights they are more or less transparent.

As soon as a crêpe de chine underslip is made, a hard, and ugly line appears. Apparently no way has yet been discovered of keeping the soft effect of these fine materials without their being.

FRENCH HOUSE-WIVES BEST.

ENGLISH WOMAN NOT SO FOND OF HER KITCHEN.

An attempt has been made by an international committee in Vienna to decide which nation possesses the best housewives.

France headed the list, and the English housewife was voted eleventh in order of merit as follows:

1. French
2. German
3. Scotch
4. Dutch
5. Norwegian, Finnish, Danish
6. Austrian, Czech, Hungarian
7. Swedish, Swiss
8. American
9. Northern Italians
10. Southern Italians
11. English
12. Polish, Rumanian, Turkish, Yugoslavian
13. Irish
14. Greek
15. Spanish
16. Russian and Bulgarian.

Under the chairmanship of a Viennese, the committee, consisting of one Frenchman, one Englishman, a Latvian, a Czechoslovakian and another Austrian, decided on certain principles of "valuation," which should leave out of account intellectual qualities, conversational brilliancy, prowess in athletics or business, and similar qualities.

The Best Cook.

Domestic virtues only, especially cooking, nursing of children and husband, cleanliness and economy were the paramount considerations. It was agreed to exempt the Baltic States, Albania, Portugal, and all extra-European States, except the U.S.A., from the valuation, owing to lack of sufficient data.

The committee further agreed to include the Belgian wives into the French group and to make no distinction among the various German peoples.

The final decision to give the "championship" to France was influenced by the unanimously accepted qualities of cooking and thrift which distinguish the French housewife.

Her cooking secured her the first place. The high place of Dutch wives is due to their leading in marks for "domestic cleanliness," and the following Scandinavian group also scored high in this respect.

Sixth place is given to a Central European group which can boast of excellent cooking, while the Swedish and Swiss housewives are clean and thrifty, devote much attention to their children, but lost marks on their cooking.

The American housewife ranks higher than might have been expected and no reason for this ranking is given.

An undoubtedly correct distinction is made between Northern and Southern Italian housewives, while the English housewife was placed so low as eleventh owing to the fact that she devotes less attention to her children and her kitchen than her sisters abroad.

The Balkan group, which follows next, had in its favour good cooking, but lost points on cleanliness. (Continued at foot of next column.)

CHANGED FASHIONS OF PARK-LANE.

COURT DEMAND BY MAN WHOSE WIFE ALTERED HER MIND.

Changing fashions in Park-lane houses were mentioned at Westminster County Court a few weeks ago by a lessee, who said he bought one house, but eventually lived in another, because his wife changed her mind.

Mr. Herbert Edward How, hotel proprietor, of 31, Park-lane, W., applied for permission to vary the terms of a lease, to enable that house to be converted into flats.

The Duke of Westminster, the Westminster City Council, and Mrs. Gladys Henderson, of Cookham Dean, Berks, were respondents.

A lease was granted by the Duke to Mr. Abraham in 1926 at a rent of £250, and assigned in 1927 to Mr. How. Mrs. Henderson held an underlease from Mr. How since 1927, for the remainder of the lease, expiring in 1933, at a rent of £275 for the first three years and £300 for the remainder.

Because of changes in the neighbourhood, the premises could not be readily let to a single tenant, Mr. How submitted.

Wife Changed Her Mind.

Mr. How's counsel said he bought the lease for £2,000, intending to occupy the house himself.

But he did not reckon with his wife, who, as women did sometimes, changed her mind and preferred No. 34, Park-lane. From December, 1924, to April, 1927, Mr. How tried to let No. 31 without success.

Park-lane had so changed its character that no one would take a house there, as a private residence for his own occupation.

Mr. E. A. O. Warrington, surveyor, said about 50 per cent. of the houses in Park-lane were private and the rest commercial property.

Mr. Ernest Yates, estate agent, said the houses had been private to-day among private residential owners.

Judge Turner said Mr. How had to show change in the character of the neighbourhood. There was no evidence that the house could not be let as a single tenement. It had been let and changed hands as recently as 1927.

"I think it is a most hopeless application," added the Judge, dismissing it.

No comments accompanied the placing of Irish, Greek and Spanish housewives, but with the latter two one may assume that marks in clean housekeeping were rather low.

Russian wives, and the Bulgarians, which were included with them, were unanimously declared by the members of the committee to be bad housewives.

Knowing that their list was bound to arouse a storm of indignation, in whichever order the ranking was arranged, the members of the committee preferred to remain anonymous, except to a few editors and doctors in Vienna, and they have done well in assuming such cover.

WHY PRAY?

ADDRESS AND DISCUSSION
AT CATHEDRAL.

Last Sunday's special Lenten sermon at St. John's Cathedral (followed by a discussion in the Cathedral Hall) was on the subject, "Why Pray," the preacher being the Rev. A. D. Stewart, headmaster of St. Paul's College.

Opening his address, Mr. Stewart said that many years ago a friend told him, "I have given up prayer. I often used to pray for things, but I never got any answer, so what is the use of it?"

The trouble probably was that his friend prayed entirely for the things he wanted. He was probably one of those who saw God as a Being, laden with parcels labelled "health," "prosperity" and other desirable things, which could be got if we bothered God long and persistently enough. Now God was certainly a giver, but there were three kinds of givers and it was necessary to see God's nature in this matter. There was, among human beings, the person who gave grudgingly and after much persuading; then there was the man who gives when asked. Lastly there were those who gave of their own accord, not indiscriminately, and to every asker, but according to a well thought out plan. God was essentially of the last kind.

Christ certainly taught of a Father ready to give. Then why pray? "Prayer is not, in my opinion, asking God to give us things. It is not a means of getting things from God. Prayer is talking with God, and taking our place with God and asking His blessing on all around us. It is helping God in His task of giving."

God had limited His own omnipotence in dealing with humanity, and St. Mark related of Christ, "He could do no mighty work there because of their unbelief." The Bishop of London, in an address on mission work, put this question, "what do I do when I pray for a particular mission station—or for missions in general?" and answered it thus: "I help to create the atmosphere in which God can work for men." When we prayed for a person who was sick or in trouble we helped to create the atmosphere in which God could work.

Power of Evil.
The New Testament taught clearly of the conflict with a definite power of evil, and in this struggle prayer was the most potent weapon. St. Paul, in a tremendous passage at the end of the Epistle to the Ephesians spoke of warfare with "Principalities and Powers" against spiritual wickedness in high places. . . . praying always. Our Lord prayed—rising up early, or even all through the night—because it was by prayer that He overcame the spiritual enemy who was to Him a terrible reality.

We knew very little of the effect of prayer or what it could accomplish. We could say little more than that prayer was ranging oneself on God's side, and joining with Him in a great conflict between good and evil. We might not seem to get the answer we wanted; sometimes there was an answer better than we imagined; often there appeared to be no answer, but in the act of prayer we became partners with God.

By prayer was not meant merely the formal prayers on one's knees, but the prayer expressed in thought at any time of night or day. At any moment one could pray, and thereby chase away frivolous or harassing thoughts, creating instead the atmosphere in which God could work for men.

THE DISCUSSION.

Demons and Possession.
The Dean opened the discussion by asking Mr. Stewart whether he personified evil or believed it to be the corporate opposition to God in men's minds.

Mr. Stewart answered that while he did not believe in a devil with horns and a tail, he did believe in a being which was trying to thwart God through men. He mentioned the question of demonic possession, saying that in China there were cases exactly similar to those mentioned in the gospels and which had been cured in the same manner by prayer.

Answers to Prayer.
A questioner asked if we should pray for things apparently contrary to nature such as rain on a cloudless day, or for things which were to the disadvantage of others, as praying for a job which another man wanted.

The preacher said that there had been so many well authenticated stories of answers to prayers for rain, against fire or against storms that he would not dare to say it was no use to pray for these things. We did not know all the powers either of nature or of prayer. With regard to praying for a job, we did not know all the circumstances of the case. Failure to get what was asked for might mean that a better job was waiting. It was suggested in this connection that often the underlying motive or urge was not the actual thing prayed for, but as (Continued on next column.)

WICKERSHAM ON PROHIBITION.

MUCH IMPROVED ENFORCEMENT.

Washington, March 24.—With the tariff safely out of the way in the Senate, prohibition once more passed into the limelight.

Mr. George W. Wickersham, chairman of President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission informed the Senate Judiciary Committee that prohibition is "measurably" enforceable and that everything points to very much improved enforcement conditions. Mr. Wickersham said that he believed the greater portion of public opinion favours enforcement, as the attention of the people of the United States was directed upon it. The present agitation of the prohibition issue was bringing improvement, in his view. He expressed surprise that the Enforcement Division was able to obtain such good man for its work when social ostracism resulted from connection with prohibition enforcement activities.

Mr. Wickersham said that perhaps 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 gallons of alcohol were diverted or converted for beverage purposes each year and that possibly 15,000,000 gallons of liquor were consumed. He called attention to the increased use of corn sugar in home distilling and said that there was fully as much "moonshine" liquor production in the mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina as was the case before prohibition.

The witness cited instances of increasing importations from Canada, attributing this situation to the fact that there were only 23,000 agents for the entire United States and under such conditions "we cannot have a man at every crossroads."

He said that it was not difficult to re-distill industrial alcohol. The bootleggers were always working upon new processes, he went on, but "some of the results are very bad."

Mr. Wickersham expressed doubts as to the expediency of using the military to enforce civil obligations.

The Law Enforcement Commission started with the assumption that the Eighteenth (Prohibition) Amendment was part of the federal constitution. Mr. Wickersham pointed out.

"It was not for us to inquire," he added, "whether the constitution should be what it is, or should not be."

THE £2 9s. A WEEK WAR HERO.

A SAD FALL.

William Henry Brain, aged 35, of Beulah-road, Sutton, who holds the D.C.M. and bar, the Military Medal, the Belgian Croix de Guerre, and two other British war medals, pleaded guilty at Croydon last month to stealing 30s. from a test letter which came into his hands as a postman at Wallington. Brain was in the Army from 1910 to 1922. "In two cases alone and unaided," said Mr. Stanley Gibson, his solicitor, "he captured enemy blockhouses that were creating terrible havoc among the men of his platoons."

When arrested Brain said that it was the only letter he had ever taken. He owed £2 on a bicycle, which he used going to and from work, and he had a wife and three children.

Mr. Gibson drew attention to his low wages, which were £2 9s. a week as an established postman. It was stated that recently Brain handed back a registered letter containing 20s. the day's takings of a sub post office, because it was not on the advice note that accompanies such letters.

Brain was put on probation for two years, and it was understood that immediate efforts would be made to get him new employment.

in the two cases mentioned, freedom from drought and a desire to make a living; the prayer might, therefore, be answered, but not in the exact form asked.

A lady said that the sort of prayer which most often got answered did not, she believed, originate in the mind of the petitioner, but he was inspired to ask it. The Dean here mentioned that there were many things which it seemed must be the will of God, and we felt directed to pray for them, but we did not get an answer to our prayers. Mr. Stewart replied that man could not judge God's will because we could not see ultimate results. Things that men sincerely believed to be wrong might possibly be working for a good end. The Dean said he would suggest that God wanted to bestow certain universal benefits but was unable to do so until His whole human family asked for them. Mr. Stewart did not quite agree, but added that if a man set his will against God, the prayers of others on his behalf might not be strong enough to break down his will. Jesus must have prayed for Judas but His prayers were not answered.

Another speaker said that he felt the answer to the question Why Pray? to be that prayer enabled us to live more nearly according to the will of God.

"SWEETER THAN THE PIPES OF PAN."

OFFICIAL OPENING OF HARBOUR PIPE LINE.

CITY HALL FOUNTAIN COMES TO LIFE.

"What do you want me to do?" asked His Excellency, the Officer Administering the Government (the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G.) when he was confronted with what appeared to be a large steering wheel. Actually it was big valve—a veritable "magic key," which, as he turned it, unlocked the harbour pipe line, and let the waters of the Shing Mun River flow into Hong Kong. The temporary flooring erected under the pier groaned and gagged as more and more interested persons stooped their heads to pass onto it and see the ceremony, and the Inspector-General of Police (the Hon. Mr. E. D. C. Wolfe) looked extremely anxious.

As His Excellency turned the wheel there came a hiss and rush of water, grateful indeed to the ears of those who remember last year's shortage of "that precious element," a noise, Mr. Southern wittily remarked in his speech, "sweeter than the pipes of Pan."

NOW, AND SIXTY YEARS AGO.

The official opening of the Harbour pipe line, which brings the water of the Shing Mun River to the Island, took place yesterday. His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government arrived at Queen's Pier at 3 p.m., accompanied by Mrs. Southern and by Mr. J. Barrow, his private secretary. He was met by the Director of Public Works, the Hon. Mr. H. T. Creasy, C.B.E., and conducted down the Pier on which a large number of interested persons were gathered, among whom were noticed Vice-Admiral Sir A. M. W. Waite, K.C.B., Major-General J. W. Sandilands, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., Sir Henry Pollock, K.C.B., Sir Shou Son Chow, M.S., Creasy, the Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga, the Hon. Dr. S. W. T. and the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall, C.M.G.

HISTORY OF THE PIPE LINE.

The Director of Public Works then addressed the gathering as follows:—

Your Excellencies, Mrs. Southern, Ladies and Gentlemen:—Before having the honour of presenting to you Mr. Henderson, the Assistant Director of Public Works in charge of special Water Works construction, I should like to say that Mr. Henderson, during the whole of his service, has been engaged upon the many schemes of Water Works extensions carried out during that period and for the last ten years he has been in charge of the Water Works of the Colony.

He was particularly associated with the first section of the Shing Mun Scheme which was sanctioned by the Secretary of State in June, 1924, and of which the Harbour Pipe Line formed an important part.

Many portions of the scheme have already been completed: viz.—The Intake Reservoir, The Tunnels and Conduit, The Reception Reservoir, The Mechanical Filtration Plant, The Land Pipe Line conveying the Shing Mun River water to Kowloon Point, The Service Reservoir now under construction and lastly the Harbour Pipe Line now completed and connected with the Hong Kong City Mains.

To have brought works of such magnitude to a successful completion is an achievement of which any Civil Engineer might well be proud.

Though other portions of the Scheme were proceeded with there was considerable delay in deciding the method that should be adopted for the Harbour Pipe Crossing, more elaborate and expensive schemes were proposed and indeed it was suggested that the Pipe should be laid in the often proposed Tunnel under the Harbour if, and when, constructed.

Mr. Henderson's proposals for the Harbour Crossing were recommended and referred to the Consulting Engineers to the Crown Agents.

Mr. Henderson's Method Approved. Early in 1929 Mr. Henderson proceeded Home to consult with both Professor and Sage and he "heard" great argument about it and about with the result that his method was approved and he hurried back to put the work in hand.

In spite of difficulties augmented by the late delivery of materials (the prompt delivery of which had been promised) this work has been brought to a successful completion at a cost of $280,000 which is considerably under the original estimate.

Details of Pipe.

The total length of the Harbour Pipe Line from Kowloon to Hong Kong is 5,914 ft., or nearly 1 1/8 miles.

The internal diameter of the Lapwelded Steel pipe is 12.535 in. approximately 12 1/2 in. it is 7/16 in. thick and is protected by double black wrapping impregnated with hot bituminous solution.

The Pipe Line is made up of 63 sections with 66 Allion loose flange joints and was manufactured by Messrs. Stewart & Lloyds, Glasgow.

There are 23 flexible ball and socket joints and 4 valves, these specials being provided by Messrs. Glenfield & Kennedy.

Fifteen anchor blocks each weighing 17 tons and 11 pairs of Reinforced Cement Concrete anchor piles have been fixed along the Pipe Line.

The total length of the rubble foundations (in various positions) is 1,370 ft.

Three divers were engaged on the work, two from North China, under the supervision of the Government-Diver, Mr. Petroff, and the actual laying occupied 57 days, the average rate of progress being over one hundred feet per day.

The discharging capacity of the Harbour Pipe is 31 million gallons per day at 250 ft. above sea level, at which height the Gardens Service Reservoir is to be built. At lower levels the discharging capacity would be increased.

Satisfactory Tests.

I have received a Report from Mr. Henderson upon the exceedingly satisfactory results of the final pressure test upon the whole Harbour Pipe Line before it was connected to the Land Sections, and in the Report he acknowledges the very valuable assistance he has received from the Port Development Office, of which Mr. Adam Henderson is in charge, and from the Water Works Maintenance Office, now in charge of Mr. Purves, who was previously closely associated with Mr. Henderson on the first section of the Shing Mun Scheme. He further reports that the Netherlands Harbour Works Company (whose representatives are present to-day) carried through their Contract in a very efficient and satisfactory manner, and last, but not least, he very highly commends Mr. Henderson, the Engineer who was in charge of this work, for the marked ability and energy which he has displayed throughout and also Mr. Petroff, the Overseer-Diver, who has worked very long hours under very trying conditions.

Your Excellency, on behalf of the Public Works Department, I would thank you for so graciously coming here to-day to perform the ceremony of opening the valves connecting the Harbour Pipe Line with the Hong Kong Water supply and thus enabling this thirsty Island to obtain some of the superfluous water from the Mainland.

H.E.'S SPEECH.

DREAM OF MANY YERAS COME TRUE.

Mr. Henderson, Assistant Director of Public Works, in charge of Water Works and his staff were then presented to His Excellency by the Hon. Mr. H. T. Creasy, after which His Excellency addressed the company in the following terms:—

Mr. Creasy:—I have the greatest pleasure in accepting your invitation to open the valves which will admit the water of the Shing Mun River to the Island of Hong Kong. Your Excellency, Ladies and Gentlemen, to-day we see the dream of many years made true, with possibilities far beyond the present reality. At present we are dependent on the immediate flow of the Shing Mun River for our additional supply to Hong Kong, and until we have large storage reservoirs on the Kowloon side we shall not have made the Hong Kong water supply safe. One reservoir is already under construction, and we hope before long to be able to make a start with the larger and more important reservoir in the Shing Mun Valley. But these reservoirs would be useless without the cross-harbour pipe. The design of the pipe-line, as Mr. Creasy has remarked, has been the subject of much controversy, and the Government found it necessary to send Mr. Henderson to England to discuss the plans with the best expert advisers at home. The result must have been very gratifying to Mr. Henderson, whose design was accepted with very slight modifications. There is an admitted danger in this design, namely that the pipe might be damaged by careless navigation or by a ship dragging its anchor in a typhoon, but we consider the risk one which it is worth one while to take in view of the great saving of expense, and on Mr. Henderson's assurance that repair should be only a matter of a few weeks.

Congratulations, Mr. Creasy, I offer to Mr. Henderson and yourself and to all those connected with you in the work, our heartiest congratulations on the successful completion of the cross-harbour pipe. It reflects the greatest credit on all concerned, and I tender the heartiest thanks of the Colony to the engineers, divers, contractors and all others who have combined to carry out this work so expeditiously and at so reasonable a cost. I wish for this pipe a long life of usefulness to the people of Hong Kong, and I can assure you that even the pipes of Pan could produce no sweeter music in Hong Kong's ears than the music of running water in Mr. Henderson's pipes.

UNDER THE PIER.

His Excellency and party were then conducted under the pier by Mr. Creasy, and the former opened the waste out valve which discharged the water obtained from Shing Mun. The whole party then went foot to the top of Wardley Street, at its junction with Queen's Road, where His Excellency opened the valve connecting the Harbour pipe with the City mains, by means of a large key wrapped in red, white and blue bunting. As he moved the key all eyes were turned to the famous fountain which has been dry for so many years. First a tiny jet appeared from the cup upheld by the triton, then as it grew in height other jets sprang up from the upper basin. Each second the water rose higher, till, in a few moments, it was playing freely, much to the excitement of a row of Chinese people gathered along Beaconsfield Arcade.

In a group were the Hon. Sir Shou Son Chow, Mrs. Creasy and Mrs. Wolfe. "My husband has seen this is the first time he has seen the fountain play," said the latter. Another voice was heard to remark that the speaker had seen the great sight when the Prince of Wales visited the Colony, while Sir Shou Son Chow said "It makes me feel very old. Last time I saw it I was only a little boy of ten, sixty years ago, I believe it used to play regularly then but I am not sure."

The crowd did not disperse till after 3.30, when the last reluctant drops rose from the fountain after the water had been turned off again for which can say how many years.

An affidavit filed by Mr. W. G. Anderson, of 7, Duddell Street, manager of the Company, stated that 6,500 ordinary shares were allotted on January 5, 1929, but owing to inadvertence no return was sent to the Registrar of Companies.

Appearing in support of the application, Mr. C. G. Alabaster, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist), said that the omission to file the allotment was due to an oversight, as a subsequent allotment of shares had been filed with the Registrar.

His Lordship allowed six months' time in which to file the return.

OFFICE BURGLARIES.

CHINESE YOUTH SENTENCED FOR ESCAPADES.

The case in which a Chinese youth was charged on three counts of larceny of various articles from the offices of the Canton Trading Association at China Building, the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha at Pedder Street, and the Texas Oil Company, Queen's Building, came up for re-hearing at the Central Magistracy before Mr. R. E. Lindsell yesterday.

The "pawbrokers," with whom some of the articles were pawned, were ordered by the Magistrate to return the property to the respective owners, who agreed to redeem them.

Defendant was sentenced to two months' hard labour on each count, or six months' imprisonment at all.

KIDNAPPER IN 'DOCK.

CHILD IS SOLD IN AMOY, BUT THIEF GETS CHANCE.

A serious charge of kidnapping a boy, five years old, in Shaikwan was preferred against a Chinese who appeared before Mr. R. E. Lindsell at the Central Magistracy yesterday. Defendant pleaded guilty.

The police officer prosecuting asked the Magistrate to remand the prisoner until a few days later, as the child's father was returning to the Colony from Amoy, and if defendant could assist in recovering the child, the police might plead that the case be dealt with leniently.

Magistrate (to defendant): I advise you, for your own good, to leave no stone unturned to recover the child. If you cannot find the child, you will be severely dealt with.

The case was adjourned until next Monday at 10 a.m.

PANICKY RICKSHA MAN.

HURLS FARE IN FRONT OF MOTOR-BUS.

A ricksha coolie who almost caused a fatal accident to his fare was yesterday charged before Mr. R. E. Lindsell for driving in a dangerous manner and also for not possessing a licence.

Inspector Alexander, prosecuting, said that at about 6.30 p.m. on March 22 the ricksha coolie was carrying a passenger and coming out of Kanyu Street into Queen's Road Central. The sudden appearance of a bus caused the ricksha coolie to become panicky and he dropped his shafts. The passenger was hurled right in front of bus No. 634. Fortunately the bus driver applied the brakes in time and an otherwise possibly fatal accident was averted. The passenger, however, sustained internal injuries and he had only recently come out of hospital.

Defendant was fined $30 on both charges, $25 or 14 days' for dangerous driving and $5 for plying his ricksha without a licence.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

CHAIRMAN DEALS EXHAUSTIVELY WITH VARIOUS PHASES OF HONG KONG'S TRADE AND FUTURE PROSPECTS.

MR. A. H. FERGUSON SPEAKS ON THE CURRENCY PROBLEM.

MORE ABOUT THE SALARIES COMMISSION REPORT.

"Despite civil war and other internal troubles," said Hon. Mr. B. D. F. Boith yesterday, when he presided over the annual meeting of the Hong Kong General Chamber of Commerce, "China's foreign trade shows little or no sign of diminishing, which is an indication of the great expansion that would occur under more settled conditions."

The Chairman, in the course of his speech, touched on some very interesting subjects, among them being references to the Salaries Commission report, the vagaries of exchange, the new trade statistics department, piracy prevention measures and the work which the Technical Committee of Shipping Survey Regulations has been doing.

Mr. A. H. Ferguson, in seconding, spoke on the currency question. He said that money conditions in the Colony were extremely easy and he sounded a note of warning to share speculators, pointing out that investing in shares was a very different thing to speculating in shares, and drew attention to what happened in New York a few months ago. He also reminded his hearers of what happened in Hong Kong in 1925.

FULL REPORT OF CHAIRMAN'S AND SECONDER'S SPEECHES.

In addition to the Chairman, the following members of the General Committee of the Chamber were present:—Mr. W. H. Bell (Vice-Chairman), the Hon. Mr. J. Owen Hughes, Mr. A. P. Bungey, Mr. V. M. Grayburn, Mr. Paul Lander, Mr. C. Gordon Mackie, Mr. T. E. Pearce, Mr. T. H. R. Shaw, Mr. J. P. Warren, and the following co-opted member:—Hon. Mr. W. E. L. Shenton.

The following individual members and firms were present:—Mr. C. Champkin, the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall, C.M.G., the Hon. Sir H. E. Pollock, K.C., and Mr. B. M. Talati, Messrs. Anderson & Ashe (Mr. T. THE CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH.

In moving the adoption of the report and accounts, which have been in your hands for some days, I shall necessarily be brief. As stated in the report, several important questions, to which the Committee has devoted a great deal of time and thought during the past twelve months, have not yet reached a stage at which they can be publicly discussed. The most important of these subjects is the draft commercial treaty between Great Britain and China, to which you have seen references in the Press. We hope to be able to announce later that our efforts have had good results.

Despite civil war and other internal troubles, China's foreign trade shows little or no sign of diminishing, which is an indication of the great expansion that would occur under more settled conditions. Too much stress cannot be laid upon the urgent necessity for abolishing the excessive internal taxation which so severely restricts the free movement of goods, the volume of trade, and the purchasing power of the currency who form the vast majority of the Chinese people, and who are themselves seriously affected, for, to quote a well-known authority on this subject (Sir H. H. Fox) who said:—

In this matter of irregular taxation the Chinese authorities cannot be charged with discrimination against foreign goods, because reports from all parts of the country go to show that Chinese produce coming down from the interior to be shipped abroad is taxed in many cases even more heavily than imports, chiefly for the benefit of military chieftains. Eggs seem to be singled out for severe treatment: A new laid egg, for instance, on its way from the farm to the port has, in addition to likin, to pay customs duty, produce and examination tax, an educational and a charitable tax.

With regard to the proposed abolition of extra-territorial rights, I cannot do better than refer members to the remarks made from the chair at the recent annual meeting of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, as to the essential safeguards which will have to be provided in order to protect and develop trade to and from China.

Salaries Commission Report.

You will note from the report that the Committee was asked by the Government for its views on the report of the Salaries Commission, 1929. We are greatly indebted to the Hon. Mr. W. E. L. Shenton, Mr. M. T. Johnson, and Mr. A. Ritchie for serving as a Special Committee to examine the report in detail. The drop in exchange occurred after the Salaries Commission reported and I think the members of that Commission will agree with me when I say that a situation with regard to sterling salaries which they naturally did not envisage has since developed. When our Special Committee was first appointed to consider the subject, an exchange in the neighbourhood of 1s. 8d. appeared to be a likely prospect, but the further drop to 1s. 6d. or thereabouts, places the situation in a new light. The Committee thinks it best, therefore, to withhold from publication, for the present, the comments which were forwarded to the Government on the Salaries Commission Report. Obviously something will have to be done to help Government officials on sterling salaries through the present exchange situation, but the method of increasing sterling salaries (already in most cases on a full standard) is the right one, and I imagine that if silver continues at the present very low level, the whole subject may have to be reconsidered from a different angle.

The Committee has been consulted by some of its members as to what increase of salary should be given to employees generally to compensate for the higher cost of living consequent upon a depreciated currency. Sterling exchange compensation arrangements are already made by some firms and it is a matter which must be left to individual action as circumstances differ so greatly in each case. If present exchange levels continue, a corresponding increase in the cost of living for some will result and firms and companies will doubtless do what they can to help their staffs, though it must be remembered that both employers (whose profits are greatly reduced) as well as employees are affected. Before coming to a decision, one might well take into consideration whether the ordinary standard of living in Hong Kong is not unnecessarily high at the present time, whether, in fact, the individual's ideas on necessary comforts and his general mode of living have not exceeded the growth and rate of progress of the Colony. If such should prove to be the case, to increase salaries at the present time would be tantamount to encouraging a continuation of this state of affairs. There is a point, which it is not economically sound to raise salaries which, in the long run, must be considered in relation to trade and this should be borne in mind just as much by the Government as it has to be by commercial concerns. After all, it is the commercial interests who, in the main, pay the taxation which provides the wherewithal for such payments.

Vagaries of Exchange.

Fluctuations in the price of silver and in the exchange value of the Hong Kong dollar during the years 1900-1929 are shown in the graph which forms an interesting enclosure to the Chamber's report for 1929. The depreciation, within six months, of more than twenty per cent, in the sterling value of our currency is a fall without precedent in recent years and calls for something more than a general reference to this factor of exchange that, in the past year, has so gravely affected us as a trading community.

Let me state firstly that the question as to whether high exchange or low exchange is, in the long run, beneficial to the Colony, is a doctrinaire point that I prefer not to deal with here. Those whose interests are definitely linked to silver cannot be expected to regard with complacency a shrinkage in the comparative value of their investments. There is, however, a wider view than that afforded from the personal standpoint. The commercial prosperity of this Colony could not have been achieved, nor is it likely to be maintained, without full consideration being given to the economic policy of our neighbours.

Certain it is that the difficulties we have had to face in exchange during the past year are not due to any feeling of insecurity in our currency. So long as we function on a silver standard, we have necessarily to accept the disabilities attaching to that standard, but it has never been urged against us that our metallic reserves are inadequate, that our note issues have been in excess of the public demand, or that any strengthening of our fiduciary obligations could replace the natural corrective of exchange fluctuation—which is adjustment of local prices.

The difficulty is that the process of adjustment lags behind the movement of exchange. When, as in the present instance, we are faced with an abnormal fall in the price of silver, due to circumstances out of our control, there must of necessity be a serious disturbance in the state of gold commitments incurred in the over-confident expectation that exchange would function normally within those limits to which we had been accustomed and that we had regarded as covering ordinary business risks.

A Dual Factor.

Two factors stand out very clearly as causing the recent collapse. The first is entirely domestic and may be traced back as far as 1925, when acute political disturbances called for prudent measures for steadying our exchange, that were best carried out by counteracting the downward tendency of silver by a premium on our banknotes that were then, as they have always been, the recognised medium for the settlement of contracts in this Colony.

The second factor is the recent adoption of a gold exchange standard by the Government of Indo-China and the incidence of heavy sales of silver by the Government of India.

As regards the first of these factors, public confidence in the wisdom of this policy was evidenced by a demand for our banknotes that, however gratifying it may have then appeared, became in time a serious embarrassment. Our note issues are, of course, subject to legal limitations. These limitations are sufficiently wide to provide for all conceivable currency needs within the Colony, but they were not designed to encourage, or to cope with, outside demands dissociated from our genuine trade requirements. It is no part of the functions of banking to facilitate the hoarding of money, and when the premium on our notes became unwieldy, a reversion to the strictly silver standard established by law became imperative. The declared policy of the banks to rehabilitate the silver dollar resulted in a heavy fall in exchange, or what was essentially the same thing, a heavy decline in the premium on the paper dollar.

Now, with regard to the second factor, so long as sterling exchange was over silver dollar parity and the silver dollar, ranked equally with the paper dollar, it was obviously profitable to mint silver dollars and import them into the Colony. Ordinarily this natural process of supply and demand should have speedily restored us to silver parity, but unfortunately, our demand coincided with the currency adjustment of Indo-China that resulted in abnormally large supplies of silver being placed on the market, and the Government of India, very inopportune for us, also came out as a heavy seller. Our demand, therefore, was more than met by these adventitious supplies, and the net result is that although we are much nearer parity now than we were six months ago, we are still very inconveniently over it. If we are to get back to silver parity we must look for a further fall in exchange, unless by a fortuitous circumstance the price of silver materially rises.

These two factors have brought about a condition of extraordinary complexity. Silver dollars are still being imported because the operation shows an immediate paper profit, but there is no apparent outlet for them. They are not really needed to supplement our currency and, sooner or later, their dead weight will become a burden only to be relieved by their export as bullion.

I would refer here to a statement made by the Chairman of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation at the recent annual meeting of shareholders, "It is obvious that a small Colony like our own cannot absorb unlimited silver dollars, and further imports of these are much to be deprecated."

Your Committee concurs entirely in this view and regards with concern the continued importation of silver dollars, not only because of the difficulties of handling them as becoming increasingly burdensome to the banks, but also because the problem of their ultimate disposal may very conceivably involve the Colony in even greater difficulties in the future.

In this connection we are gratified to know that the Government has appointed a local Committee of Enquiry into our currency and other cognate matters, with terms of reference sufficiently comprehensive to include all points that have bearing on our present difficulties. We cannot anticipate the findings of that Committee and I will therefore only add that we are justified in hoping that its deliberations on these vital questions will be productive of good results.

Merchant members of the Chamber particularly will be glad to know that the department for the compilation of trade statistics is about to resume its operations, and we hope, more effectively than formerly. Whether this proves to be the case or not, will depend largely upon merchants themselves. I take this opportunity of appealing to all business firms to see that their staffs fill in the forms promptly and I would add, intelligently, so that the totals of imports and exports at the end of the month, or at the end of the year, as the case may be, are at least approximately correct.

A Field for Co-operation.

There is one aspect of this matter in which, I am advised, the Chamber of Commerce can usefully co-operate with the Government, and I am sure the Committee will be glad to do so. It has been pointed out that in regard to cotton piece goods, for example, one Chinese character is generally used to represent descriptions which, in the import headings, would appear under half a dozen names. If these half a dozen items appear in the export side of the statistics as one item, under one Chinese name, that particular commodity will erroneously appear to be sold more freely than it is, bought, and the other five articles will, also erroneously, appear to have been entirely consumed in Hong Kong. I mention this as an example of the way in which the statistics may be vitiated. I hope it will be possible, with the help of certain of our members who have special knowledge of the subject, both from the language and the technical points of view, to assist the Government in preparing an explanatory guide to classification in both English and Chinese.

I gladly acknowledge that the Government have done all they can to overcome the drawbacks which many people complained of in regard to the former system of collecting statistics. Mr. Lloyd, the Superintendent of the Imports and Exports Department, has been most helpful in all our discussions. Under the new system, it will no longer be necessary to send a messenger to the Import and Export Office with a declaration form to be checked before the cargo can be received, or "delivered" and, furthermore, documents may be in either English or Chinese. This will obviate the necessity for re-establishing the special occupation of "permit-writers," and queuing up at the Import and Export Office with the attendant evil of squeeze, as to which complaints have been made in the past. Merchants will be free to maintain a running log of their imports and exports, without any necessity to group them by commodity or by steamer, rendering the combined results, say, once a week. If this work is done as part of the regular routine, I am sure it will be of very little trouble. The procedure has been decentralised to the extent that shipping companies before signing bills of lading or other documents of title will be required to ascertain the name and address of the consignee, and to render, as they do at present, copies of their manifests to the Import and Export Office, but with this additional information, shipping companies have agreed to give a trial to this system—known as the post-declaration system—which we trust will facilitate the compilation of trade statistics so necessary in these days. It will be appreciated that considerable additional work and responsibility has been thrown upon the shipping companies in this connection, and we trust that importers and exporters will render them every assistance to ensure the success of the new system.

Anti-Piracy Guards.

Turning to shipping questions, during the year the prevention of piracy on British vessels has been prominently before the Committee and it is satisfactory to note that its efforts, together with those of the shipping companies concerned, to secure the provision of properly disciplined and equipped military guards have resulted in freedom of attack for all vessels so provided. Those of us who travel from time to time up and down the China Coast have been impressed by the efficient service rendered by the military guards, and realise that, if anti-piracy guards are to be effective in the future, this discipline and control must be maintained.

When His Majesty's Government advised their intention to withdraw these guards on April 1, earnest representations were made that they should reconsider the situation so as to maintain these essentials. The Government have, however, decided that for the future guards will be provided through the Hong Kong Police, but that until this force is available the present system of military guards will continue at the expense of the steamship companies. It is an extraordinary position that in a matter which affects all trading interests the steamship companies should have to incur this exceedingly heavy tax on their enterprise. Recruitment, discipline and control is obviously beyond the scope of the companies themselves and your Committee is of opinion that to be really efficient, these should be maintained by the Navy and Military Authorities. We understand, however, that there will be considerable improvement on the conditions existing prior to the provision of the military guards, and that the new force will be under regular discipline, with proper N.C.O.s, and that the whole force will be effectively controlled.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ANNUAL MEETING.

Of Importance To Shipping.

I desire to comment upon the special work of great importance to the shipping community which the Technical Committee on Shipping Survey Regulations has been doing since its appointment in February, 1929. The members of this Committee, are all busy men and they have been holding frequent meetings in the evenings throughout summer and winter for the purpose of advising as to the adaptation of Board of Trade Rules to local shipping. These rules have naturally had in view mainly European conditions and the Atlantic and Continental trades. Circumstances in the Far East are, of course, very different, and it is simple economics that coolies, carried at very low fares, cannot be given (and would not, in fact, appreciate) accommodation comparable with that provided for, say, a European emigrant to the North American Continent. Furthermore, if the conditions governing the grant of the Hong Kong Passenger Certificate are made too onerous, it will follow that shipping will be driven from the port to the detriment of the whole interests of this Colony, and British shipping companies will find themselves severely handicapped in competing with ships under other registries whose survey requirements are less exacting. Climatic differences also come into the question. More important than all, valuable trades in Eastern waters which have been established and satisfactorily conducted, as long as or even longer than, the foundation of this Colony, cannot be jeopardized by the imposition of rules framed to meet entirely different conditions. I am glad to say that this has been fully recognized by the Government and its advisers, who have consistently stated in regard to ships other than foreign-going, Hong Kong is free to make its own rules, adapted in order to meet local conditions.

It is recommended in the Technical Committee's report that the requirements of the new rules should not apply to existing ships, and this suggestion meets with the strong approval of the Chamber.

The area to be included in the Hong Kong Passenger Certificate still awaits settlement. Another important question is the provision in Hong Kong of some machinery comparable to the Consultative Branch of the Board of Trade in London, so that when, on technical questions, differences of opinion arise between shipowners and shipbuilders on the one hand and the Government Marine Surveyors on the other, final decisions may be given without the delay inseparable from an appeal to London.

I will not, on this occasion, go deeply into the subject, as it is full of technicalities which non-shipping members can hardly be expected to study very closely. The Chamber owes a great debt of gratitude to Mr. Dyer, Mr. Shervell, Mr. James, Mr. Morrison, Mr. Brayfield, Mr. Hunter, Capt. Kennedy and Capt. Skinner for the onerous and valuable work they have done, and we hope will continue to do until a conclusion is reached in this matter.

Vehicular Ferry Service.

I notice that my predecessor in this chair remarked last year that the question of a vehicular ferry service across the harbour appears to be becoming somewhat of a hardy annual. At any rate, it is satisfactory to note, from an official statement recently issued, that the Government has reached a decision on one aspect of the matter, namely that responsibility for the construction and maintenance of the piers will be retained by the Government, and that questions of building the necessary boats out of Government funds, and of the most satisfactory method of running them, if so built, will be further explored. We are assured that these matters are engaging the immediate attention of the Government, so it is hoped that the promulgation of a workable scheme to provide this important addition to local transport facilities will not be long delayed. In the nature of things, it must be some time before ferries are actually put into commission.

It is in advising on subjects of this kind that the recently formed Harbour Advisory Board may be confidently expected to do much useful work. Its first meeting, I hear, accomplished a great deal, and since then matters of considerable moment have been referred to the Board.

The Chamber has continued during 1929 to subscribe, on behalf of a limited number of members, to Reuter's service of commercial telegrams. The cost per member is reasonable and the service seems to be thoroughly appreciated by those who receive it. If other members wish to subscribe, all that is necessary is to get in touch with the office of the Chamber where details are available.

It is gratifying to see that the Chinese Language School has again been well supported. The number of individuals on the roll during 1929 was 46. Twice during the year the number of prospective students awaiting enrolment justified the formation of new classes, each of which, like an excursion train, was run in duplicate, in order to avoid unduly large numbers in one class. Apart from the satisfaction which it gives to see such an awakening of interest in the learning of Cantonese, the sum of $5,838.10, representing surplus of income over expenditure, has been placed against a deficit on the Language School of $3,301.60 as on January 1, 1929, leaving only a deficit of $463.50.

Before moving the adoption of the report and accounts, it will be observed that the total income on general account amounted to $45,076.82 as compared with $44,074.89 the previous year. The surplus of income over expenditure was less this year by some $4,000, due mainly to incorporation expenses of $3,398.43, and increased secretarial expenses.

I would like to take this opportunity of thanking several members of the Chamber who have afforded me great assistance in the compilation of this review.

I now move the adoption of the report and accounts, and when this has been seconded, I shall be glad to answer, to the best of my ability, any questions which members may desire to ask. (Applause.)

MR. FERGUSON'S SPEECH.

Mr. A. H. Ferguson, in rising to second the report and accounts, congratulated the Chairman on his very able speech, which was not only enlightening but expressed very concisely the main points of interest to the members of the local Chamber. Continuing, he said:

I think we can readily infer not only from the Chairman's speech but from the annual report submitted to us, the tremendous amount of work that has devolved upon each member of the Committee, and although it is easy to say that they have been dealing principally with commercial or shipping affairs in which their respective firms are directly interested, I feel sure we owe them a deep debt of gratitude not only for the sacrifice of their individual time but for the conscientious and thorough manner in which they have tackled problems which must have occasioned prolonged discussions, and necessitated viewing the subjects from all angles. (Applause.)

When I was asked to second the report (before a copy had reached me) I was hoping it would contain some controversial matter, but I find myself so much in agreement with what has been set down, there seems no occasion for my saying very much.

Unfulfilled Ideals.

I much regret, even if only on the score of trade, that the ideals and aspirations of the Nationalist Government have not as far been realized and that for China, Proper the place and security we are looking and hoping for, are still apparently a long way off. Much as we and China's best friends deplore the present unhealthy situation, the Nationalist Government must see for themselves that the root of their trouble is internal, and that any reasonable assistance the Powers could render, were it wanted, is theirs for the asking.

The Salaries Commission.

The Chairman has touched on the salaries question, and I feel sure employers, as far as they reasonably can, will give full consideration to the hardships from which employees are suffering through no fault of their own, and allow some compensation, reasonable and equitable to both parties. The Salaries Commission seems to have come in for a good deal of criticism recently, but when one considers that at the time of their deliberations exchange was much higher than it is at the moment, every allowance must be made, as no one (not even bankers) could foresee such a tremendous slump in the price of silver.

Currency Problems.

You may expect me to criticize in some way the remarks of the Chairman on the currency question. In the main, I may say here I am in accord with the views he has expressed. Still, there are so many angles from which the problem can be tackled, I doubt if it is possible to get any two persons who have carefully studied the subject, to arrive at a common understanding. It is sometimes not appreciated that it was in order to protect themselves that the Banks were forced in October last to endeavour to return to what was then, and what still is, the legal currency basis. The real difficulty is to find the best method in which our currency, in a practical way, can be aligned effectively to silver. As this is one of the tasks allotted to a Committee of Enquiry, recently gazetted by Government, it would be out of place for me to push forward my views at this meeting. Much as most banks deprecate the further imports of British dollars entirely because they become a dead-weight redundancy in currency, I need only state that in my opinion to stop at this condemnation will get us nowhere, and it would almost appear necessary for some other exchange corrective to be suggested in order to maintain our rates reasonably close to silver parity.

A Note of Warning.

As you are aware, gentlemen, we have arrived at a time when money conditions in the Colony are extremely easy, and the causes are no doubt well known. There is a strong tendency, therefore, for a great portion of these funds to be diverted to the share-market. I have nothing to say against honest investment in local shares, and after the thin time, sharebrokers have experienced for years, we are all glad for their sakes, that they are now probably earning a reasonable livelihood. I hope I may be excused if I sound a note of warning. There is a vast difference between investment and speculation. We have become acquainted with what happened in New York a few months ago, and we have our own experience in 1925 to fall back upon. Surely the effects of this share slump are still retained in our memory and in the interests of the Colony I seriously hope we will not allow such a situation to repeat itself. (Applause.)

The Accounts.

As regards the accounts, very little comment appears necessary. I notice the cost of the market reports and the annual report are slightly in excess of receipts, but doubtless members' subscriptions take care of this small deficit. I am pleased to see, as regards the Chinese Language School, that the deficiency of the previous year has been all but wiped out by the surplus income over expenditure for 1929. I presume that all that is wanted is for the account to balance, and if the same support to the Language School is given this year, the deficit of $463.50 will doubtless disappear in next year's accounts.

With these remarks I conclude, gentlemen, with regrets, for taking up so much of your time. I therefore formally second the resolution proposed by the Chairman for the adoption of the report and accounts. (Applause.)

The following resolutions were proposed and carried:—
"That Messrs. Percy Smith, Seth & Fleming be appointed Auditors to the Hong Kong General Chamber of Commerce at a remuneration of $200 per annum." (Proposed by Mr. F. C. Hall and seconded by Mr. Li Tse Fong.)

That the election of the following members by the General Committee since the last annual meeting be confirmed:—Mr. C. Champkin, The Advertising and Publicity Bureau, The American Express Co., Inc., Messrs. Anderson & Ash, The Canadian Trade Commission at Hong Kong, Messrs. R. Johnson & Co., The Swedish Chinese Export and Import Co., Ltd., Messrs. James Yau & Co. (Proposed by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. W. H. Bell.)

New General Committee.

The following were appointed the General Committee for the ensuing year on the proposal of Mr. Dudley King, seconded by Mr. L. C. F. Bellamy:—Hon. Mr. J. Owen Hughes, Mr. J. K. Bousfield, Mr. A. P. Bungey, Mr. V. M. Grayburn, Mr. Paul Lander, Mr. C. Gordon Mackie, Mr. J. Peterson, Mr. T. E. Pearce, Mr. T. H. R. Shaw, Mr. J. P. Warren.

Vote of Thanks.

Sir Henry Pollock, K.C.: "I propose a hearty vote of thanks to the retiring Committee for the way in which they conducted the business of the Chamber during the last year."

This was greeted with loud applause.

The New Chairman.

At a committee meeting held subsequent to the annual meeting, Mr. C. Gordon Mackie was elected Chairman of the Chamber for the ensuing year, and Mr. T. H. R. Shaw, Vice-Chairman.

MAN WHO "USED" SCISSORS.

REPORTED TO BE INSANE.

The Chinese who was charged before Mr. Whyte-Smith some time ago with maliciously attacking two women in Temple Street with a pair of scissors and causing them grievous bodily harm, was again before the Magistrate yesterday when another week's remand was ordered.

The defendant was placed under observation and when the Court sat yesterday the Magistrate intimated that Dr. Cannon had informed him that the defendant was suffering from epileptic insanity. He (the Magistrate) suggested that the defendant should be sent to the asylum, but ordered the remand pending a certified report from the medical authorities of the gaol.

AIRCRAFTSMAN IN COURT.

ANSWERS FIVE TRAFFIC SUMMONSES.

EARLY MORNING SMASH IN NATHAN ROAD.

The motor mishap which occurred in Nathan Road on March 29, in which some men from the Kai Tak Aerodrome were involved, had its sequel when A.C.I. Tower, of the Kai Tak Base, appeared before Mr. Whyte-Smith on the following charges:—

(1) For being intoxicated while driving an unlicensed motor-cycle and sidcar along Nathan Road; (2) For failing to have full control of his machine; (3) For driving without an appropriate driver's licence; (4) For driving an unlicensed motor-cycle, and (5) Driving at a rate which was a danger to the public.

Defendant pleaded guilty to charges 3 and 4 but denied the remaining three, one of which was withdrawn later and another dismissed.

Giving evidence for the prosecution, Sergeant Biffin said that about 2 a.m. on March 30, he was riding in a ricksha along Nathan Road from south to north, opposite the Orient Tobacco Company, when he heard a cycle coming from behind. The engine was racing and the machine was, apparently, travelling at a good speed. The next thing he knew was, witness continued, that the side car hit the off wheel of the ricksha, throwing the driver and himself over. The cycle then appeared to travel another 100 feet or so and then turned a somersault. He then went to the Mongkok Police Station, where he telephoned for an ambulance. This arrived in due course and conveyed the coolie and himself to the Kowloon Hospital.

Interposing, the Magistrate asked who was in the sidcar, but witness replied that he was not sure—as far as he remembered, there were about five people on the machine. He did not hear any horn being sounded.

Asked if he had any questions to put to the witness, Tower remarked that there was no silence on the machine at the time, and anyone who knew anything about cycles would agree that if a machine had no silence on it, it would sound faster than it was actually travelling.

The ricksha coolie corroborated first witness' evidence, after which the Sergeant was recalled and asked if he could say for certain whether he actually saw defendant driving the cycle at the time. He answered in the negative.

Cuts On the Road Surface.

Sergeant Clark was next in the box. He said that on the morning in question he was called at about 2.15 and informed that there had been an accident. He went to the spot, which was near the Orient Tobacco Company, and there he found a ricksha lying broken on the side of the road. Farther on there lay a Harley-Davidson combination with the wheels upturned. That was 101 feet away from the ricksha, and both vehicles were about 2 or 3 yards from the side channel. There was also a skid mark—a short one about 12 feet long—and on the surface of the road were some cuts which gave one the impression that they were caused by some sharp part of the cycle scraping the ground. At this stage defendant asked the officer if it were not possible that the marks were caused by the foot-rests, which in this particular machine, were rather low. The officer said that it was possible, and that concluded his evidence.

The next witness called by the Police was Dr. D. J. Valentine of the Kowloon Hospital, who said that on 30th instant, he was called at about 2.30 a.m. to see three men who had been admitted to the hospital as the result of a motor-cycle accident. One of these gave his name as Tower. He was suffering from severe abrasions to the head, face, hands and legs, and considerable bruising, especially the neck. His face was a bit red and congested and he appeared somewhat dazed. He was disinclined to speak much and his breath smelt of alcohol. He was lying in bed then, as he had been too badly knocked about to get up.

The Magistrate at this point asked if defendant's utterances were clear, and the doctor answered that he did not speak much, but what little he spoke was clear enough. He was also talking sense.

No—Not Definitely Drunk.

The Aircraftsman asked the doctor if he would say for certain that he was under the influence of liquor, but witness said no.

Further evidence was taken, after which Inspector Nicol asked leave to withdraw the summons for failing to have full control of his machine.

Summing up, his Worship said that there was not enough evidence to prove that Tower was drunk on the night in question. That summons would be dismissed. As regards charge number three, he would impose a fine of $5. For failing to license his machine, the defendant would be fined $10, and as for driving dangerously, a fine (Continued at foot of next column).

GOVERNMENT AS PLAINTIFF.

CLAIM FOR DAMAGE TO A PIER.

FLOATING LOGS DURING LAST TYPHOON.

A claim for damage done to a pier at the Praya East Reclamation during the typhoon of August 22, 1929, was brought by the Government, through the Attorney General, at the Summary Court yesterday before the Justice of the Peace (Mr. Justice Wood). Defendants were the On Cheung Timber Company and Ho Kai Chik, the proprietor.

The Government claimed the sum of $638, alleging negligence on the part of the defendants in allowing a number of logs which had been improperly secured to float about in close proximity to the pier.

Mr. L. R. Andrews, Assistant Crown Solicitor, conducted the case for the Crown, and Mr. F. C. E. Rendall appeared for the defence.

A foreman of the P.W.D. stated in evidence that he visited the pier on August 21 and noticed nine logs floating near the pier. He warned defendants to move the logs, as they were bumping against the pier and a typhoon signal was up. Two days later witness again went to the spot, when he found that six logs were still there. Three other logs which were underneath the pier had gone.

Cross-examined by Mr. Rendall, witness said that only negligible damage was done on August 21. He did not see 100 pieces of American pine, and there were nine logs, not six.

Evidence as to typhoon signals displayed during the period was given by Mr. C. W. Jeffries, F.R.A.S., of the Royal Observatory. Witness produced his records to show that ample warning had been given of the approaching typhoon.

Mr. A. Anderson, F.W.D. engineer, expressed the opinion that the damage might have been caused by a junk. Damaged portions could not be repaired but would have to be replaced. Witness said that the damage would be made good as soon as the Government received the money.

Mr. Rendall: You mean if you succeed in this action, you will repair the pier?—Yes.

Before opening his defence, Mr. Rendall submitted that he had no case to answer. The plaintiff had produced evidence to show the various inspections made, but there was no evidence to show what actually happened on the day in question.

His Lordship held that there was some evidence to link the damage having been caused by the piling heavy bumping against the pier.

Defendant's Efforts Fruitless.

Giving evidence from the witness-box, Ho Kai Chik, proprietor of the defendant company, said that on August 21 he took delivery of 100 pieces of American pine from the U.S. Kentucky, and also six Sandakan logs from the Kowloon Godown. The timber was towed to the sea wall near his yard. In the morning, the day of the typhoon, he found that the American pine had been hauled ashore, but not the logs. He then telephoned for a launch but found that none would venture out in such weather.

Witness went on to say that with great difficulty he and his folk managed to secure the six logs together with wire ropes, drove staples into the wood to keep the rope in position, and tied the logs alongside the sea wall. When the typhoon came, the logs broke away and drifted. Witness saw one of the logs strike the pier when it was carried westward. Four of the logs were found the next day in the Naval Yard and one in the middle of the harbour. The sixth log had not been traced and they had looked all round the island for it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Andrews, defendant said that when they were about to cease work on the night of August 21, the pulley used for hauling the logs ashore gave way and fell into the sea. A new pulley was put in the next morning, but in any case witness agreed that they could not have hauled up all the logs even if the pulley had been in good order. He agreed it was unwise to have brought so many logs to the yard when he knew what kind of weather might be expected. His Lordship adjourned the case until to-morrow morning to hear legal arguments from both sides.

SUMMONS WITHDRAWN.

The summons against Commander Maxwell, Car No. 2223, were withdrawn. Asking his Worship's permission to do so, Inspector Nicol said he was acting under the instructions of the I.G.P.

Hong Kong, April 1, 1930.

OUR "COUSINS" AND US.

It is somewhat strange, and no less sad, that within a few days of writing on the possibility of serious

Anglo-American friction comes news of a savage and scurrilous attack upon the British Prime Minister by a section of the American Press.

All decent citizens of the United States—whatever they may think about naval disarmament in general, and Anglo-American co-operation in particular—will deplore the grossly offensive tone of the open letter addressed by the HEARST papers to Mr. RAMSAY MACDONALD.

There may appear to be reasons for doubting his sincerity and his motives, but if it is desired to give expression to such doubts, those opinions could and should be stated in courteous terms. The HEARST references to "half-caste American correspondents of international-minded metropolitan newspapers"

we need not concern ourselves about. The contemporaries for which Mr. HEARST has such contempt are well able to look after themselves, but why it should be considered necessary personally to abuse Mr. MACDONALD is not easy to explain—other than as another definite attempt to inflame anti-

British feeling among the American people.

A few days ago we dealt in these columns with a book written by Mr.

LUNWELL DENNY entitled "American

Conquers Britain," and described by the author as a record of economic war. In that most interesting—though provocative—volume extensive reference is made to what is called "the dear cousin myth." There is, according to Mr.

DENNY, a disquieting similarity between Anglo-German relations of yesterday and Anglo-American relations to-day. In reply to those who argue that blood being thicker than water, war between Britons and Americans is unthinkable, the author asks if brother can fight brother as in the North and South struggle, by what costly forgetfulness can anyone assume that continual refuse to fight cousin because of kinship? Mr. DENNY is of opinion that all the talk about cousins on either side of the Atlantic has created more friction than friendship, and is chiefly responsible for the tendency of each to exaggerate the faults and failings of the other—as cousins are apt to do. As a matter of fact, although there is a bond of common language between the British and American peoples, only one-third of the population of the United States is of British stock, and rarely does one find an American of any heritage or class who thinks of Britain as his motherland. No less than 60 per cent. of the American people are of non-British descent, but the older Anglo-Saxon stock—although in numerical minority—rule the

In other words, then, according to Mr. DENNY—who should certainly know the facts—the anti-British sentiment which exists in the United States is not solely directed against Great Britain but is also against those Americans who exercise control over national affairs, and are suspected of pro-British leanings. Mr. DENNY says quite frankly that it is very generous of English publicists to be amused rather than hurt by the occasional outbursts of anti-British "hate," but the fact is that this movement is one of the most fundamental developments of American social and political life. It cuts across every major American problem, whether of domestic or international policy. "Big Bill"

Thompson is not the buffoon he is believed to be by British observers, but a shrewd politician. He has demonstrated that an unscrupulous campaign of hate against Britain is the quickest way to win votes in the second largest city in the United States. Although it is true the Thompson Administration collapsed as a result of its own rottenness, the anti-British forces which raised the now discarded "boss" to power have not collapsed with him, but are as strong as ever. Mr.
ALBERT E. SMITH—who in 1928 received the largest popular vote ever given to a Democratic presidential candidate—represents the anti-British group now struggling for power against the domination of an older ruling class. Mr. Hoover himself was dubbed "Sir Herbert" in order to ridicule his allegedly pro-British sympathies. Knowledge of these insights upon American politics helps to explain—though not to excuse—the latest HEARST outburst.

While it would be easy to exaggerate the importance of the attack which has been made on the Prime Minister of Great Britain, it would be foolish to treat the incident as of no consequence whatever. It is at least a sharp reminder that Anglo-American differences are not so easy to settle as the common bonds between them would seem to make possible. The real danger
—if such it can be called—now made against Mr. MACDONALD is that he is doing his utmost to help create a pacific "inferior navy" sentiment in the United States.
This is an old grievance which has been revived. Fear of Great Britain has disappeared since the war, but the "inferiority complex" continues to breed suspicions of hidden plans of aggression. Even Mr. HOOVER, in his presidential campaign, said that a mercantile marine under the American flag was not only essential to foreign trade "but to our defence"—as a naval reserve. The war on British shipping started when it was decided for strategic and commercial reasons to put a larger American mercantile fleet on the seas at all costs. Not only are foreign-owned ships excluded from the coastal trade, but foreign-built vessels also —which hit Britain again. It has been even suggested that foreign ships using American docks should pay extra tolls in return for the privilege of engaging in trade with United States ports. In Canada, in South America, and in the Far East there is economic conflict between British and American interests. The struggle for export markets and for raw materials is getting keener, and a state of economic war already "actually exists. Here lies the real danger of the HEARST outbursts. By such methods it would be very easy to inflame American public opinion, not to the extent of declaring war, but to a degree which would make impossible any real co-operation between the United States and other nations to attain such aims as are contemplated by the Conference now sitting in London. And that, though not exactly disastrous,
would be a bitter disappointment.

CURRENCY REFORM ADVOCATED.

KEMMERER COMMISSION REPORT ISSUED.

NATION-WIDE SYSTEM URGED.

[REUTER'S PACIFIC SERVICE.]

SHANGHAI, March 30.

The report of the Kemmerer Commission of Financial Experts, submitted last November to His Excellency T. V. Soong, Minister of Finance, a very lengthy document running into 200 pages, has just been published.

The Commission spent the whole of 1929 in China investigating financial conditions. The report, after laying down a Project of Law for the gradual introduction of a gold-standard currency system in China, gives an historical sketch and report on the present condition of the currency, followed by a scheme for its reform and an explanation, at length, of specific provisions of the gold-standard project, with relevant appendices concerning exchange rates, silver and the circulation of coins and paper-money throughout the country.

TWO THINGS NEEDED.

Dealing with the proposed gold standard, the report says:—

Currency reform, which is urgently needed in China, should involve two things—the replacement of the present confused currencies by a uniform and nation-wide currency system, and the introduction of the gold-standard. The chaotic condition of China's currency is a serious handicap to trade and to the development and prosperity of the country. China is the only important country to-day upon the silver standard. The silver standard is also a great handicap to China, particularly in the disturbing effect it has upon the country's foreign trade, and in the difficulties it creates in the management of the Government's finances, since government receipts are almost wholly in terms of silver, while a large part of the payments are fixed in terms of gold.

The project of law in the Kemmerer Report provides for the gradual introduction of a qualified form of the gold-exchange standard, and arranges for the permanent retirement from circulation of the various monies now in use, thus giving China a national and uniform gold currency system.

New Gold Unit.

The new gold currency unit, for which the name "sun" has been suggested, is to contain 60,000 grains of pure gold and therefore to have a value equivalent to 40 cents in United States currency ($2.50 = G.S.D.) to 10, 7,735.00, sterling, and to 0.6023 Japanese gold yen. This unit was selected largely because it is of practically the same value, in terms of gold, as the silver dollars now current in most parts of China. The shift from the present silver unit to a gold unit of approximately the same value should involve little if any disturbance to prices, wages and the relationship between debtors and creditors. If an individual, for example, receives 100 dollars a month on the present basis, he would presumably receive 100 suns a month on the gold basis, and where an article now costs him one dollar it would presumably then cost him one sun.

The Project provides for silver coins of one sun, 50 cents and 20 cents; nickel coins of 10 cents and 5 cents; and copper coins of 1 cent, 1/2 cent and 1/4 cent. The smallest copper coin is not to be minted unless an urgent need for such a coin appears. The Project does not provide for the minting of gold coins. The gold standard does not require the coinage or circulation of gold, and most countries to-day on the gold standard do not have gold coins in active circulation. The Project provides, however, for the maintenance of the parity of all coins with the value of a fixed gold unit, and provides a mechanism whereby the amount of currency in circulation will vary in the same manner as the amount of currency varies in such countries as the United States or Great Britain as a result of actual imports and exports of gold. The proposed system thus provides the essential features of the gold standard, but without the coinage or circulation of gold.

Fiduciary Coins.

All of the coins, including the silver sun, are to be fiduciary, and maintained at a parity with gold by means of unlimited redemption in drafts on gold-standard countries, or in gold bars, at the option of the Government. Although the Project gives the Government the option of redemption in gold bars, it is expected that this form of redemption will be rarely if ever used. In order to provide for redemption and to provide for the sale abroad of drafts payable in gold, a gold-standard trust fund is to be established. The Fund is to amount to at least 35 per cent of the value of the coins in circulation, and is to be divided into two parts. Part I. is to consist of gold and certain kinds of foreign credits payable in gold. Part II. is to consist of gold-standard coins in China, and metal purchased for coinage purposes. Part I. will be held in two or three foreign financial centres, at the outlet probably only in New York and London, and will earn interest for the Government. This part of the Fund is to be used only for the redemption of coins in China by means of drafts as already mentioned.

A Buffer Fund.

Part II. of the Fund, consisting of Chinese coins and metal for coinage purposes, will provide a supply of new currency as the need arises, or will take up the slack if the currency should become redundant. Thus Part II. will constitute a buffer fund, regulating automatically the supply of currency in China to changing trade needs. An excessive drain on Part I. of the Fund will be checked automatically by a contraction of the currency in China, the currency redeemed going into Part II. of the Fund where it will be locked up.

The administration of the Fund and of the gold standard is to be entrusted to a Currency Department in the Ministry of Finance. An examination of the Fund may be made at any time by the three bankers' associations of Shanghai, by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai or by the Central Bank.

THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN TREATY.

EXPERT EXAMINATION OF DRAFT TREATY.

[BRITISH WIRELESS SERVICE.]

RUGBY, March 30.

The British and Egyptian negotiations will be formally and publicly opened in the Locarno Room at the Foreign Office to-morrow morning, when speeches will be made by the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Henderson, and the Egyptian Premier, Nakhas Pasha.

After this session it is probable that the negotiations will develop into an expert examination of the existing draft of the treaty. That draft, embodying proposals for a lasting and honourable settlement of the British Egyptian question, was drawn up in agreement by Mr. Henderson and by Mahmoud Pasha and published last August.

Mr. Henderson, who in a covering note described the proposals as representing the extreme limit to which he could recommend to the British Government to go, undertook that if the proposals were ratified by the Egyptian Parliament, he would at once submit them to Parliament in London, with a view to the conclusion and ratification of the treaty carrying them into effect.

Delegates Welcomed.

LONDON, March 31.

Mr. Henderson is principal British delegate, and Premier Nakhas Pasha is the principal Egyptian delegate at the conference to negotiate the Anglo-Egyptian political issues.

Mr. Henderson, in extending the British Government's welcome at the public opening, which was held at the Foreign Office, said they had met to seal, by treaty, the friendship of two peoples whose interests were identical in many respects and refused to contemplate the possibility of failure.

He declared Egypt should be enabled as a free independent sovereign State to play her part in comity of nations befitting her ancient greatness and modern progress.

Nakhas Pasha replying said: Past failures of negotiations had not discouraged them in their determination to reach a loyal understanding with Britain. They were convinced the task would be successfully achieved and it was only natural for Britain, the "mother of liberty," to joyfully greet the entry of Egypt, the "mother of all civilization," into the League of Nations.

The conference then sat privately.

NAVAL CONFERENCE.

A NEW CRISIS REPORTED.

A SENSIBLE REDUCTION OF TRAGEDY ON LAKE REQUIRED.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

LONDON, March 30.

The Naval Conference is continuing its attempt to find a formula which will fill the gap between the somewhat vague phrasing of article 18 in the League of Nations' covenant and France's definite demand for security.

While it is recognised that the task is most difficult, there is always the possibility of obtaining a definition satisfying all concerned. It is with this hope that the discussions are proceeding and article 18 is being closely examined.

To-day's development consisted in conversations between Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Signor Grandi at Chequers in regard to Italy's interest in any new definition of article 18 and in the discussions of the formula.

The official British spokesman emphasised that Britain was anxious to do the utmost for peace, but any further military commitments were absolutely impossible. The British delegation met at Downing Street to-night after Mr. MacDonald's return from Chequers and the meeting of the heads of the delegations was fixed for March.

Quest for Formula.

The newspapers give prominence to reports of a new crisis in the Naval Conference. They declare that the British and French experts, who have been searching for a formula to reconcile the Franco-British viewpoints, have reached a complete deadlock.

Press Opinion.

Whilst newspapers generally agree that the Naval Conference is deadlocked, the Daily News declares it has been marked by the rapprochement of British and French views, and adds, "if they can be carried a little further a sensible reduction of the French tonnage figures may be anticipated, with some confidence, but if it cannot be the Conference, so far as a Five-Power understanding goes, will fail."

Action Cannot Be Delayed.

The general feeling in Conference circles, last night, is said to have been that decisive action could not be delayed longer, and that by Friday, when a plenary session will be held, every delegation must be prepared to state its position publicly.

Success or failure to achieve a Five-Power treaty will depend very largely on discussions at negotiations during interval.

Japan's Reply.

TOKYO, March 31.

The instructions to the Japanese delegation are virtually certain to be despatched to London to-morrow afternoon.

It is expected they will be of a conciliatory nature accepting the proposed terms with certain reservations.

Firstly, ensuring acceptance does not imply Japan's readiness to give up her demands of 70 per cent. of 8-inch gun cruisers permanently.

Secondly, that Japan is allowed to carry out a certain amount of Naval construction between now and 1930, for the purpose of giving employment to skilled dockyard workers in the meantime.

The Foreign Office completed the instructions this morning, and will show them to Naval experts this evening, but it is understood they will be sent to the Cabinet to-morrow unaltered whether the Naval experts approve or disapprove.

It now only remains to obtain the Cabinet's approval, which is practically assured, after which the Emperor's sanction will be asked.

Japanese Delegation Ignored?

TOKYO, March 31.

Admiral Kato, Chief of the Naval Staff, speaking to the Press, declared that so long as the Government decided its attitude to the American proposal, he himself would refrain from making the matter a political issue.

In the meantime the Navy Office is reported to be angered at Press dispatches from London reporting that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald is ignoring the Japanese delegation, and has communicated direct with Tokyo, through the British Ambassador, stating that the responsibility of the failure of the Conference will revolve on Japan if they refuse the proposed compromise.

GOVERNMENT'S STATEMENT.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

BOMBAY, March 30.

A Government communique states that the report that large scale resignations of village officers at Gujarat, resulting from Gandhi's campaign in that area, is exaggerated. Only one talati (village accountant) and 24 patels (village headmen and revenue collectors) have resigned, many since have sought revocation.

Others despite their alleged resignations, are carrying on their duties. Most of the resignations were obtained through local intimidation, such as the refusal of water, notices of eviction from houses, and other inducements.

[REUTER'S AMERICAN SERVICE.]

NEW YORK, March 30.

The death is announced of Mr. Robert Gould Shaw, the first husband of Lady Astor, from whom he was divorced in 1903 when he married Miss Mary Converse. A member of a well-known Boston family, Mr. Shaw was a prominent sportsman and an enthusiastic polo player.

A DIVERSION FROM POLITICS.

JOURNALISTS WIN SPELLING COMPETITION.

[REUTER'S AMERICAN SERVICE.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.

Members of the United States Congress were worsted last night in a spelling contest between members of Congress and Washington newspaper correspondents.

The Congress men were obliged to retire one by one before stumbling blocks such as "teleography," "refractor," and "stalactite." The last surviving member of the Congress representatives broke down over the spelling of "kimono," giving it a final "A" instead of "O."

A correspondent of a New York newspaper was finally crowned "champion speller of the United States."

The contest was broadcast throughout the country and a bell was rung near the microphone whenever a competitor made a mistake.

COOLIE AND HIS HOARD.

OPIUM SMUGGLER HEAVILY SENTENCED.

Charges of possessing illicit opium were preferred against two Chinese who appeared Mr. R. E. Lindell yesterday. The second defendant pleaded not guilty and was discharged on first defendant accepting sole responsibility.

The first defendant described himself as a coolie, but Revenue Officer Grimmit, who prosecuted, said that hundreds of dollars were found in his wife's safe when defendant's matched in Kennedy Town was raided. R.O. Grimmit also stated that large quantities of opium were recently discovered some distance away from the shed and probably came from some of the Pakhoi ships. Defendant is also alleged to have kept an opium divan.

Fines amounting to $1,750, or nine months' imprisonment, were imposed on defendant.

A MEAN TRICK ON A CHINESE WOMAN.

SIXTY DOLLARS BY FRAUD!

A Chinese woman obtained $60 from a woman under false pretences was yesterday sentenced to three months' hard labour by Mr. T. S. Whyte-Smith.

The defendant went to the woman's house with some letters that were supposed to be written by her relatives asking for money and so obtained the sum in question. He admitted the charge but said he acted under the instructions of another man.

Detective Sergeant Fowle said that the letter in this case was supposed to be written by the woman's husband who was in Singapore.

INDIAN COTTON TAXES.

BRITISH PREFERENCE MODIFIED.

NATIONALISTS WALK OUT.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

NEW DELHI, March 31.

The Tariff Bill embodying the new taxes on cotton piece-goods was adopted by the Assembly with an amendment, moved by the Indian Chetty, and was accepted by the Government, modifying British preference in certain classes of goods, which compete with Indian lines, in effect removing British preference in the case of plain grey cloth, namely, unbleached cloth, or cloth dyed in the case of other classes. In other words preference disappears wherever 3 annas duty applies, but remains where ad valorem duty applies.

The Bill passed without division after Pandit Malaviya and the Nationalist party have walked out.

CHINESE GUNBOAT SUNK.

TEN LIVES LOST.

STORM ON WEST RIVER.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

A Canton report says that a Chinese gunboat was sunk at Dosing on the West River on Sunday morning when over ten lives were lost.

A storm suddenly rose in the early morning. The Canton gunboat Kung Hon which was in a state of repair and which was then moored in the middle of the stream was sunk. Soon after a tow-boat happened to pass by and rescued over ten of the 30 souls on board.

The rest were missing. The Commander and Vice-Commander of the gunboat were not on board at the time, they having gone to Wuchow the previous day.

In consequence of the storm, which lasted less than a quarter of an hour, many sampans were also sunk. Trees were uprooted and serious damages were done to roofs, etc. A number of people were injured.

The Kremlin is once more interesting itself in China and eagerly anticipates the arrival of the Chinese delegation, now en route to Moscow.

It is stated that the Comintern recently assigned a considerable sum of money to the new schemes in China.

All Soviet specialists experienced in Chinese revolutionary affairs have again been sent East.

The Khabarovsk Eastern Language School has received an order to print a series of Communist pamphlets and short cyclopedias of Socialist reconstruction in Chinese. These books are destined for recently established Communist propaganda schools for Chinese in Manchuria.

NEW C.E.C. TO BE SUMMONED.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

PEKING, March 31.

Chen Kung Po and other Reorganisationists who are still in Peking, held a meeting yesterday evening with Shansi representatives.

The meeting was at times most stormy, but they finally agreed that a new Central Executive Committee be summoned here consisting of seven of the Reorganisationists, seven Western Hills Party and seven representatives from Shansi and Kuomintang militaries. This C.E.C. will arrange for the setting up of a central secretariat.

It is understood these proposals will now be submitted to Yen Hsi Shan and Feng Yu Hsiang for their approval.

MENACE OF "REDS."

PRECAUTIONARY STEPS AGAINST PERIL.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

NANKING, March 31.

Drastic precautionary measures are being taken in Nanking in the northern border of Kwangtung against the menace of the Reds under Tak and Mo Chak Tung, who are striking down from Taiyui, in southern Kiangsi, towards Kwangtung.

A meeting was recently held by the magistrate to devise measures against the Red invasion, and the People's Militia, which has more than 4,000 members, in preparing to cope with the situation. Wang Ming Lieh, the former Magistrate of Nanking, has been appointed to direct the defensive forces. A regiment of Canton troops has arrived in the district to assist the militia.

FREEDOM OF THE MALAYA PRESS.

SIR CECIL CLEMENTI DENIES INTERFERENCE.

POLICY WITH REGARD TO KUOMINTANG.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

SINGAPORE, March 31.

An important pronouncement was made by Sir Cecil Clementi, at a recent meeting of the Straits Settlements Legislative Council, over which he presided for the first time, when, in connection with the recent banning of the Kuomintang, Mr. Lim Cheng Ean, asked if the English Press in Malaya had been interfered with, or pressure brought to bear on them to refrain from comment.

Sir Cecil gave an emphatic denial of the charge, but declared that in view of the delicacy of Anglo-Chinese relations, the Chinese Vernacular Press must be subjected to censorship in this matter.

A Chinese Protest.

Mr. Lim Cheng Ean said he desired to draw attention to the Government's policy with regard to the Kuomintang. He proceeded: I am not a member of the Kuomintang, but what I desire to refer to is the freedom of the Press.

"I understand, Sir, that pressure was brought to bear upon the Press not to make any comments in regard to the Government's pronouncement on the question of the Kuomintang."

"I do not know how true it is but I wish to say, on behalf of the Press, that a serious encroachment or serious interference with its liberties has taken place."

"I say that the freedom of the Press should be preserved and protected as much as possible."

"It is possible that if there had been no interference with the Press there may have been an expression of opinion which would have been very interesting."

"I hope to have your assurance, Sir, that I am wrong and the rumour I have heard is false."

"Before resuming my seat I wish to make it quite clear that I am not associating myself with the Kuomintang or with its aims or objects."

"I am merely concerned with that vital matter, the freedom of the Press."

His Excellency's Reply.

Before bringing the meeting to a close His Excellency, replying to Mr. Lim Cheng Ean, said:—"The Hon. Member prefaces his remarks by a statement that he has no criticism to make with regard to Government's policy towards the Kuomintang in Malaya."

"I am glad to know that Government's policy in this respect has been endorsed by Chinese opinion throughout Malaya."

"There has been no interference with the freedom of the English Press in Malaya."

H.K.C.C. TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

RUMJAHNS ENTER SEMI-FINAL.

GOOD MATCH YESTERDAY.

As expected, yesterday's Open Doubles tie between the Rumjahns cousins and the Ng Brothers produced a good match, in which all four exponents featured favourably. After an interesting struggle, the Rumjahns, who started favourites, gained the issue by three sets to one, the final scores being 6-1, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4. They thus enter the semi-final where they meet C. A. L. Rumjahns and J. A. Casumbhoy in an all Indian contest.

The match attracted a great deal of attention, and on the whole, it reached a high standard, play generally being interesting to watch. Ground conditions made matters difficult for the players, but despite that, they went out for their shots, with the result that some very fast exchanges were seen throughout. Close volleys brightened up the struggle, and at different times the four scored brilliant shots.

Ng Sze Cheung kept his end up extremely well, and although staying behind most of the time, beat his opponents by many times by fine shots. His brother did excellent work at the net, sending over many stinging shots. They did not, however, combine well, and it was just this that accounted for the difference between the two pairs.

GOOD PLAY BY RUMJAHNS.

The Rumjahns showed their usual good understanding, and their fine efforts in working their way up together to the net pleased the gallery. They had, however, to keep alert all the time, as their opponents could always treat their loose shots with severity. They started off in splendid style, and by winning the first set easily, they gave the impression that they would walk away with the match, but their opponents quickly checked them in the second set, in which the Ng's forced them into errors frequently. From two all, the Chinese took the next three games, and after an unsuccessful attempt to win the set in the next game, eventually won it at 6-3.

The Rumjahns quickly regained the ascendancy in the following set by a good all round performance, and led by the odd set again. A good struggle followed for the fourth set, in which play sometimes became exciting. The Rumjahns led by the odd game all the way, till 5-4 when after a final effort by the Ng's to draw level, they won at 6-4.

INTERNATIONAL POLO.

BRITAIN'S CHANCES THIS YEAR.

In view of the forthcoming series of international matches for the Westchester Polo Cup between England and the United States, at Meadow Brook, it is interesting to note that, although our attempts to regain the cup since the war have failed, polo statistics show that we have many more good players than there are in America. The latest list of handicaps issued by Hurlingham contains 1,455 names, of which 86, excluding foreigners, appear in the top half—that is to say, handicapped at five points or over. The latest United States list shows that they have 2,768 players, of whom only 52 are rated at over four points, a very much lower percentage indeed.

The Hurlingham list of courses does not include the British players who appear in the Indian Polo Association's list, and who are eligible to represent the home country. They number no fewer than 1,267, and 59 of them are worth five points or better, not counting fourteen native Indians. Thus between

CRICKET NOTES.

RECREIO LEAD AGAIN.

[By "L. B. W."]

The uncertain state of the weather made it necessary for most of Saturday's cricket matches to be postponed, but the Recreio and Police team met in their league game at King's Park, and the home team won with the result that they now again are at the top of the League Table. They have, incidentally, completed their league programme and are to be congratulated upon having had such a successful season. They played ten matches, won eight, drew one and lost one, and they still have a chance of becoming champions for the season. All depends on the result of the H.K.C.C.-I.R.C. match, which, I believe, will be played this Saturday. If the Club win, they will then retain the shield for another season, but if they lose then Recreio will be champions. If, however, the match results in a draw, then there will have to be a play off between the Club and Club de Recreio.

Personally I rather fancy that the Club will retain the shield. As I said in my notes sometime ago, there is something very wrong with the Sookunpoo lot. True they have the right stuff in them, but, as a team, they simply cannot get going. And to make matters worse, I understand most of them have lost interest in cricket, now—tennis claiming the bigger portion of their time. The Club have yet another point in their favour and that is they will be playing on home ground.

That will be the only league match down for decision, and I feel sure it will attract quite a crowd of spectators. The Indians might bring off a surprise win, if they beat first, otherwise their chances are very remote.

R.A.O.C. will meet the Craignower Cricket Club in a friendly at Sookunpoo, and I expect the visitors to win. The positions of the teams, up-to-date, are:

	P.	W.	D.	L.	Pts.
Recreio	10	8	1	1	25
Hong Kong C.C.	9	8	0	1	24
Kowloon C.C.	9	5	3	1	18

HOME RUGGER.

BRITISH ARMY WINS IN FRANCE.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

PARIS, March 30.
A rugby football match between the British and French Armies was played here to-day. The British Army won by five points to nil.

SOCCER VETERAN.

CAPPED IN 1912; STILL PLAYING.

Possibly the most remarkable example of football longevity among Association professionals in the game to-day is afforded by David McLean, who, when with Sheffield Wednesday in 1912, played for Scotland against England. McLean had left his native place, Forfar, for Glasgow some years before, but the then redoubtable James Quinn kept him out of the Celtic team, and McLean continued his peregrinations, which took him to Sheffield, by way of Preston, and eventually back to Scotland by way of Darlington. McLean in the first round of the current Scottish Cup ties scored three goals for his first love, Forfar Athletic.

Two veterans associated with more noted clubs than McLean were in the thick of Cup-tie strife this month, when Peter Kerr captained the Heart of Midlothian at Dundee and Patrick Gallagher took the field for Falkirk. When the Celtic signed Gallagher in December, 1911, it was stated that "it was feared that he had not the physique for senior football." Now, 18 seasons later, he has played in his fourth bout of Cup-tie football in 19 days. As for Kerr, he was already well-established in senior football when Gallagher was recruited from the juniors by the Celtic. The pair met in a Cup final as long ago as April, 1914.

the two countries there are 107 players among the higher-handicapped ones, and 145 of them belong to Britain. From these figures it would appear that polo is flourishing at home and our chances of winning back the Westchester Cup this year may well be brighter than they have been for a long time.

Hong Kong at Play.

SPORTS NOTES AND COMMENTS.

[By "BROADCASTER."]

The handicapping and classification of the ponies in the forthcoming race meeting at Happy Valley will no doubt provide punters with plenty of material to muse over during the week. For the present it is difficult to nominate a single winner, and until we hear further as to form and condition, I think the weights will be of little assistance. The rainfall in the early mornings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday last, happily did not interfere with the training.

An interesting entry in this week's racing is Nationalist II belonging to Mr. "Dynasty." The pony had a fairly good record in Shanghai and much will depend on the condition of the animal when he starts in Hong Kong. There are few who think that Nationalist II will account for the Aggregate Stakes, but personally I think the local stalwarts will give him a very hard race, and if Nationalist II is going to win at all, the time will be better than that returned for the First Aggregate Stakes, which was 2 minutes and 2 seconds—a difficult task for the Dynasty animal.

Lawn bowlers commenced "training" during the week-end following the decision of the H.K.L.B.A. meeting to open the League season on May 3. An important suggestion made at the meeting was that the annual interport should be decided on the best of three games instead of one game, as has been the practice since the tests commenced twelve years ago. As the hint about such a method was first thrown out by Mr. Phillips of the Shanghai team three days before the last interport during after-dinner remarks on the adverse effect of too much entertainment at the official matches, there is every reason to hope that this year's meeting in Shanghai will be decided on the basis of the new method.

Club matches will, therefore, be curtailed, but in their absence, more than one interport match (which generally commands more interest) will be provided. At the same time it may be hoped that under the new system more players will get an opportunity of being chosen to play when there are three tests in which the same four need not necessarily be played. The presentation of a small souvenir, such as a badge or a medal, to the individual players among the League winning teams was a useful idea which was adopted by the meeting.

As a result of Saturday's football games, a change of leadership in the senior league table has been effected. The Navy displacing K.O.S.B. by virtue of their narrow victory over the Police. The tussle for the championship now resolves itself between the sailors and the Chinese Athletic team, who are two points behind, with one match in hand. Both teams have to meet the Kowloon F.C. but the Chinese team is set the more difficult task as they have also to meet the Somerset, who, although they have little interest in the League, are Shield finalists. The match between the Athletics and the Somerset should result with honours even.

The game between the Club de Recreio and St. Joseph's was not productive of good football, as both teams were not at full strength. St. Joseph's, especially, playing with several junior men. The game was fairly even, but I expected Recreio to win in view of the good work done by them during the last few matches. I understand, however, that had the College forwards not been so shaky, they would have taken full points from the Portuguese team. Saturday's game was a return match, the result of the first one being in favour of St. Joseph's.

It is regrettable that bad feeling should have run so high in two of the junior matches played last week. The Athletic "A," who are better placed in the league table than the Somerset, lost by two clear goals to the soldiers on Wednesday last, and it was in this game that a Somerset player was sent off the field. The Chinese "A" team is making a strong bid for the championship of the junior division, and the defeat rather affected their chances. It is noteworthy, however, that they have only lost twice out of 20 matches which they played. In the match between the Club juniors and the Ewos, which the latter won by a single goal, a player was ordered off.

The Navy juniors lost a valuable point on Saturday last when they failed to account for the Eastern (Continued at foot of next column).

THE FRANCONIA HERE.

CREW PLAY CRICKET WITH THE GARRISON.

OVER 400 VISITORS FOR HONG KONG.

The Cunard liner, Franconia, paid her seventh visit to this port, when she arrived early yesterday morning from Manila. She has a passenger list of four hundred and twenty and her crew numbers five hundred and five.

Our representative went on board and was taken round the ship by one of the officers, who said that they had had fine weather ever since they left Madeira.

The ship is one of the floating palaces one so often reads about these days, and the comfort of all passengers is well catered for. The writing room is very spick and span, and in glass cabinets are exhibits of old English China (Wedgwood) and also some fine pieces of Bernard Moore Ware.

There are two dining rooms for first class passengers and the larger one provides for 350 guests. One of the features of the ship is the beautiful swimming tank, 40 feet long by 18 feet wide, and built in the old Roman style. At one end of the bath is a spring board while the dressing rooms all round it are very neatly got up. The gymnasium is spacious and mention must be made of the full size squash racquets court which stands on the left of the swimming tank, on deck lower.

The crew of the Franconia has a very good cricket team and yesterday they tried conclusions with an Army XI on the Kowloon Cricket Club ground. The match resulted in a win for the hosts by 56 runs, and was a thoroughly enjoyable affair.

The Franconia stays here till 5.30 p.m. on Wednesday when she will sail for Keelung. Captain E. T. Britten; R.D. R.N.R., is in command.

MODERN DANCING.

VARYING THE MONOTONY.

Last night a wireless talk from the Hong Kong station was given by Mr. Albert Barnett who, with his partner, is leaving for Australia this week to fulfil a number of engagements already booked in the Commonwealth. Speaking of the dance known as the "Trebla," Mr. Barnett said:

"We originated the Trebla because my partner, Miss Nora Chilo, and I felt a change of music was required in our ballrooms. You will admit a programme which consists of from fourteen to fifteen fox-trots, and about two waltzes, may become somewhat monotonous. Firstly we inspected all previous dance rhythms—it is quite impossible to invent a new one—and finally decided that the most suitable one was the mazurka, with its wonderful wealth of good music. Think of the marvellous mazurkas composed by the immortal Chopin, the mazurkas of Delibes, Ganne and the brothers Strauss.

"Having selected our rhythm, the next thing we had to invent were the steps to harmonise with it. These had to be easy as well as picturesque. It was useless to incorporate any movement that only professional experts could accomplish. We wanted a dance that any of you could learn in three lessons, and feel perfectly comfortable when you were on the ballroom floor for the first time."

"After working many months we evolved the Trebla in its present form, and it consists of seven standardised figures. The Trebla step, right and left-hand turns, the Chilo step, the promenade, the point step, and the glide-through. You can dance these figures in any order; you can omit or repeat any of them; if only three of them are learnt you can have a really enjoyable little dance to really beautiful music."

Mr. Barnett then gave a detailed description of several of the steps, and by means of gramophone records gave some splendid examples of mazurkas, including Chopin's mazurka in B flat.

Football Club. The sailors attacked most of the time, but the Eastern team have been practising hard for their shield game and found no difficulty in keeping the sailors out, strong though the latter's forward line was. The attack on the Navy's goal at the beginning of the second half of the match led supporters of the Eastern team to entertain high hopes of a lead, but the sailors were also sound in their defence, and a goalless draw was about the fairest indication of the strength of the two sides.

THE BALLET OF YOUTH.

MISS VIOLET CAPELL AND HER PUPILS.

DANCING DISPLAY AT THE THEATRE ROYAL.

The annual dancing display given by Miss Violet Capell and her pupils, is looked forward to, not only by the young performers and their parents, but by a considerable number of others who find this ballet of youth as refreshing as it is charming to witness. The first performance, at the Theatre Royal yesterday, went well from start to finish, the house was full, and it was difficult to say whether the clever star pupils, or the wondering, blundering babies got the more applause.

Miss Capell seems to have a most unusual gift of attempting what is very hard—and succeeding. She puts all her cards on the table, and the most accomplished—on the stage, and she arranges an ambitious programme for them. Very tiny children—many of them have only had four-months' training—hold the stage alone for a few minutes during a pas seul, and play their parts in the complicated pattern of a big ensemble. She walks in safety that dangerous middle course between arranging a public entertainment and seeing that each child, whatever its abilities, is given a chance. The greatest charm of her displays is that all the pupils appear to take pleasure in their own share and a pride in the whole.

The Awkward Squad.

The programme opens with a procession of tiny children who trip and stumble onto the stage. The dance is called "Coons," and I wondered if Miss Capell seized upon the name, and designed the little stripped frocks to fit it, as she watched the progress of the "awkward squad." I seem to remember dancing something very similar in my nursery days when it was called "The Babies Polka." But that does not matter. The bright eyes and flushed cheeks, the earnest endeavour, interrupted sometimes by a fit of shyness, make a charming effect. After a minute or two, when confidence is restored, the babies dance with beaming smiles. Most of them forget the careful drilling of weeks in their real enjoyment of what they are doing, but here and there is one—a little older than the rest—who gives the necessary admonishing push or pull to keep the ball rolling.

They appear again in an ensemble called "The Babies Playtime," a delightfully natural arrangement, and with some of the older girls, in "The Town Carnival." This, in some respect, the most attractive item of the programme because of its apparent artlessness. A band of children of all ages, in a variety of gaily coloured costumes, run onto the stage and dance round in a ring. Then two tiny people come forward and dance a hornpipe, which is received with applause by their fellows—who are wandering freely about the stage. Two other small people follow them with an Irish jig, a group of clowns do some tumbling, and three little Japanese maidens, first charmingly with their fans. At precisely the right moment the curtain is run down on a flushed and laughing group of children.

- 4.—Pas-de-Seul....."Mary Hayes."

The Stars.

The stars are of all magnitudes. There is tiny Mary Hayes who dances a pas seul with complete composure. Georgio Jowitt who proves himself to be among other things a "female impersonator" of remarkable skill, and a very small girl Coleen Quinn, who gravely executes a difficult Russian dance.

A size larger are Gwyneth Lloyd-Jones with her dainty pas seul entitled "He loves me, he loves me not," and Audrey Goodman, who shows herself to be an actress as well as a dancer when she holds the stage alone in the item called "1829-1930." The biggest soloists are Ellen Ford, in a graceful and very well executed dance, "Street Dancer," Dorothy Moss who makes a charming wood nymph, and Stella Ho Lu who is, perhaps, one of the most accomplished pupils. Rachel Wong, whose regal and dainty charms deepen every year as she learns a more confident control of her movements, takes the lead in a very pretty quintette called "Coquette." Phyllis Capell and Jean Bird are quite delightful in their minut, which is very effectively accompanied by the singing of Mrs. Womack from the orchestra.

Ballets and Classical Dances.

The ballets and classical dancing by the elder girls are always one of the features of Miss Capell's display and are as pleasing as ever this year. The first, the Butterfly Ballet, is charmingly dressed, but perhaps even more graceful is the ensemble with which the second part of the programme opens. Both beauty in classical dancing which cannot be replaced by any other form, and that it will live long after jazz is a memory of the Dark Ages. The finale, a jazz ballet, was nevertheless very attractive, the movements of the bigger girls being wonderfully accurate and well-timed and the stage effect very striking and original.

YESTERDAY'S CRICKET.

ARMY BEAT FRANCONIANS.

A cricket eleven from the R.M.S. Franconia, which arrived in port yesterday morning, was entertained in a friendly match on the Kowloon Cricket Club ground in the afternoon by an Army XI. The game was a thoroughly enjoyable affair and resulted in a win for the hosts by 56 runs.

Musson and Davies started the innings for the local team, and although the latter was out early for a "duck," Musson played a stylish innings and went on to make 47 runs before he was out. Owen Hughes turned out for the Army team and made a like number of runs in an enterprising knock.

For the Franconians, Ross bowled extremely well, taking 5 wickets for only 17 runs.

When the visitors went in to bat, it was evident they found the wicket rather strange, with the result that, with the exception of two of their men, the rest of the team were dismissed cheaply. B. Pettman made 31 runs in fine style, while J. Grace, going in late, played pluckily for 10 not out. For the home team Wyatt returned the splendid analysis of 5 for 16.

Both sides batted only 10 men, as Capt. Veddar of the Army was absent, while A. E. Jones of the Franconia had to retire half-way through, as he was hurt in trying to stop a "daisy-cutter."

The scores were:-

DOCK COMPANY LULL IN 1929.

ESTABLISHMENTS
"REASONABLY WELL EMPLOYED."

EFFORTS BEING MADE TO STUDY ECONOMY.

The Hon. Mr. B. D. F. Beith, speaking from the chair at the annual meeting of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Co., Ltd., held at Queen's Building yesterday, said that during the year 1929, the Dock's establishments were only reasonably well employed. A number of new ships of small tonnage were constructed but the advent of motor shipbuilding in Hong Kong did not keep some of the Dock's departments as well employed as they might have been. Mr. Beith also emphasized the fact that all efforts are being made to study economy in every possible way consistent with efficiency.

Supporting the Chairman were Sir Robert Ho Tung, Messrs. Allan Cameron, J. P. Warren, W. H. Bell and A. H. White (Directors), Mr. R. M. Dyer, B.Sc., M.I.N.A. (Chief Manager), Mr. E. L. Hosie, C.A. (Secretary), Shareholders present were Messrs. H. Kadoorie, J. P. Ulderup, Li Tsung, Leung Fat, Jin J. Arnold, Lo Koon King, Wong Ping Sun, M. Fernandez, K. P. Cooper, E. Abraham, Chan Sin Hing and G. W. Sewell.

CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH.

The Chairman addressing the meeting said:-

The gross profit, you will observe, is about $250,000 better than the previous year, which, while regretting, we cannot recommend the payment of a dividend, keeping in view present conditions in shipping the world over. I trust, shareholders will consider reasonably satisfactory.

Turning to the accounts, you will notice interest charges are practically the same as the previous year and come to the very considerable sum of nearly $415,000.

Stock in hand amounts to $2,046,139.33 as against $1,914,546.88 at the end of 1928. It is interesting to note that even in a comparatively quiet year such as we have had, the general stock turned over was about 60 per cent. of the total, which is sufficient evidence of its quality and market value.

The indebtedness to our bankers is slightly less. Additions to plant come to about $927,000, which is mostly the amount spent in widening our No. 1 Dock, to which I referred last year. This work, I am pleased to tell you, is making good progress and should be completed well before the end of this year.

Depreciation amounts to over $143,000, which is considered ample. Your buildings and plant are in excellent order and the upkeep of same has been paid for out of revenue.

No bad debts were incurred during the year, while the outstanding at December 31 have since practically all been collected. The remaining unpaid accounts are good.

"Reasonably Well Employed."

During the year our establishments were only reasonably well employed. A number of new ships, all small in tonnage, were constructed, but the advent of motor shipbuilding in Hong Kong, of which we constructed several with imported motors, did not keep some of our departments as well employed as they should be. The advisability of building marine motors ourselves will have to be considered in the future.

Docking and repair work was fair, but with the exception of one or two large jobs, nothing very much out of our ordinary routine offered itself or was obtainable.

I can assure shareholders that during these lean years we are passing through, all efforts are being made to study economy in every possible way consistent with efficiency and reasonable progress.

I would like to thank our staff, both European and Chinese, for their loyal service during the past year.

The report and accounts were seconded by Mr. Li Tsung Fong and carried unanimously.

Messrs. Allan Cameron and B. D. F. Beith were re-elected to the Board of Directors on the proposition of Mr. Horace Kadoorie and seconded by Mr. J. P. Ulderup.

Messrs. Lowe, Bingham and Matthews and Messrs. Percy Smith, Seth and Fleming were re-elected auditors for the ensuing year.

Hyman, Dr. and Mrs. F. G. Hart, Mrs. E. B. Hurff, Miss E. B. Hurff, Mother M. Joseph, Mr. T. C. Kiang, Mrs. D. Kovach, Mrs. E. D. Mather, Mr. N. C. Mather, Mrs. W. S. McClintic, Master S. H. HIGHLANDERS LAND AT KOWLOON.

IMPRESSIVE MARCH TO CAMP.

FULL LIST OF OFFICERS.

The s.s. Talamba, with the 2nd Battalion the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders on board, berthed alongside Hoik's Wharf at 7 a.m., and about two hours later the regiment disembarked, and marched by way of Nathan Road to Sham Shui Po camp.

The men's smart bearing impressed everyone, and their steady easy swing under the full weight of pack, rifle, "tin" helmet and other equipment, showed that their fitness had not in the least suffered during the voyage from Chinwangtao. Large numbers of people lined the street and the fine pipe and brass bands were very greatly admired.

The Officers.

The Commanding Officer, Lieut. Colonel R. G. Maclean, M.C., has been in command for exactly two years.

The full list of those arriving yesterday is as follows:-

Seventeen officers, 7 wives, and 3 children.

Five warrant officers, 5 wives, and 6 children.

603 other ranks, 24 wives, and 44 children.

The officers of the Battalion are as follows:-

Major: N. C. Bennett, O.B.E., M.C., H. J. D. Clark, M.C., and G. F. Connal Rowan.

Captains: C. L. Campbell, M.C., T. MacA. Stewart, O.B.E., M.C., R. G. Moir, D.S.O., M.C., R. C. B. Anderson, M.C., R. G. Hyde, J. H. Garmichael, and J. A. Agnew-Wallace, M.C. (Adjutant).

Lieutenants: J. G. MacKellar, R. G. Aitken (in U.K.), R. V. Dewar, Durie, A. Dunlop, G. L. Neilson, J. R. M. Cape, A. T. Roper-Caldbeck, O. B. Younger, and R. M. Keith Murray.

Lieutenants J. C. Church, G. S. B. Bramwell, J. H. G. Black, and K. B. L. Davidson.

Lieutenant-Quartermaster S. Mackay, M.C.

One Company with the following officers are still in Weihaiwei:-

Capt. C. L. Campbell, Capt. R. G. Hyde, 2/Lieut. J. C. Church, and 2/Lieut. F. C. G. Graham.

In addition to the 17 officers arriving by the Talamba, three were already in Hong Kong with the advance party while one is away on leave in the United Kingdom.

Battle Honours.

The Regiment has the following battle honours:-Cape of Good Hope, 1806, Rorica, Vimiera, Corunna, Pyrenees, Nivelle, Nive, Orthes, Toulouse, Peninsula, South Africa, 1840-7, 1851-2-3, Alma, Balaklava, Sevastopol, Lucknow, South Africa, 1870, Modder River, Paardeberg, South Africa 1899-1902.
